In Memoriam

Ray Ethan Torrey M.A. PhD.

On January 16, 1956, the University of Massachusetts lost one of its great professors and the country one of its most stimulating teachers of botany. Dr. Ray Ethan Torrey was born in the very shadows of the University at North Leverett in December, 1887 - and he spent his boyhood in the Amherst country. Later, he came to the University, where he was awarded a B.S. degree in 1912. He then went on to Harvard University for graduate work in botany where he studied under the great plant anatomist, Professor E. C. Jeffrey. Harvard awarded Torrey an M.A. in 1916 and a Ph. D. in 1918. He taught at Grove City College and at Wesleyan for a few years before returning (in 1919) to Massachusetts, where he spent the rest of his life, indeed, rarely if ever, leaving the environs of Amherst. He was promoted through the various academic ranks, culminating in 1937 in his appointment to a full professorship.

The thousands of Massachusetts students who took Dr. Torrey's general botany course will never forget that experience. He lectured at breakneck speed, hardly pausing to execute his superb blackboard drawings. He taught his students botany, but he did more than that - he sought to awaken their sluggish minds in the hope that this would awaken their even more sluggish spirits. His method was to disturb, to startle, and to shock the complacent and the cock-sure. He was forever pointing to the larger significance of biological facts and principles. He stimulated his students to think, and they thus found that his course was one of the most liberating experiences of their college careers. Although he probed into the philosophical and the metaphysical, he recognized the place of humor. Somehow he conveyed to all the standards of a gentleman and many were inspired by his high example. In his laboratory classes he used the Socratic method as he taught botany in the great tradition of Asa Gray and Jeffrey. He was a remarkably successful teacher, as is attested by the enthusiasm of hordes of former students and by the scores of students he attracted to botany - Degner of Hawaii, Drew of Michigan State, Andrews of Washington University, Steeves of Harvard, Hall of Minnesota, Moseley of California, Swanson of Hopkins, Church of Brown, Delevoryas of Michigan State, Delisle of Notre Dame, Hunt of Antioch, O'Mara of Iowa State, Woodworth of Bennington, and a host of others. His textbook of general botany, a classic in its field, was widely adopted.

He gave two elegant advanced courses - systematic botany of the Angiosperms and comparative anatomy of the green plants. These were superbly organized and they were kept up to date by revisions which were constantly being inserted, sometimes just a few minutes before lecture time. The hundreds of charts he carefully prepared for these courses were works of art.

Few of his former general botany students knew that Torrey had published several classic papers in the field of plant morphology and phylogeny. Some of these students had occasion to read these papers in later life, and they marveled at the penetration of thought, the beauty of style, and the artistry of the illustrations. They then realized that Torrey could have been a great scientist - a great investigator - had he chosen that path. In spite of turning his back on original research, Torrey had few peers in comparative anatomy and plant phylogeny. In addition, he was a remarkably competent taxonomist.

Long after his former students forget the botany they learned at his feet, they will recall the philosophical principles he espoused. He labored mightily to reveal the true philosophical nature of science - its inner significance and its limitations. He led his students from science to philosophy - and a few to the realm of metaphysics. There were always a few select individuals - some botanists, a few English majors and others - who were invited to his famous Friday evening seminars where there were profound and animated discussions of philosophy, religion, literature, art and music. These fortunate few will never forget the stimulus of these discussions - the stimulus to independent thinking and to independent reading and study.

What was the substance of Torrey's teaching? The limits of space prevent an adequate summary, but one quotation from his "Science and Its Function in Education" should be recorded here: "In each one of us undreamed-of powers lie asleep, and when these powers are awakened into activity they will lead us to 'heights we never dreamed of scaling.' Searching the depths of our own natures we shall find power, wisdom and joy. Searching outer nature we shall unlock her secrets learning 'how she made the rocks and rivers, the stars and the ever-moving sea.' This is the doctrine of the soul and its immortality; it visages the 'far-off, divine event toward which the whole creation moves' . . . . Nothing less than the realization of a transcendental self will ever content us and to this splendid purpose all lesser things are to be made subservient and contributory. This, as I see it, is the purpose of life, collective as well as individual - of your life and of mine . . . . The real purpose of the college and the only basis on which it can justify its existence before the stern tribunal of Truth is to train men in body, heart and mind for this ancient quest. Sciences, humanities, arts - what are they all but the armor with which the college equips its youth for the glorious and supremely dangerous adventure!"

Thus taught Ray Ethan Torrey, gifted botanist and dedicated theosophist.

Spring . . . .

1955-56—a year of building, a year of change at the University of Massachusetts. We have progressed since 1863 when the Commonwealth, accepting the provisions of the 1862 Morrill Land Grant Act, founded the Agricultural College at Amherst. Five years later when the College was first opened to students, there was a teaching staff of four persons on a campus consisting only of four wooden buildings. A notable stride was made when, by legislative enactment in 1931, the name of the institution was changed to Massachusetts State College. And then, in May, 1947 the College became the University of Massachusetts. Dreams were dreamed; plans were made.

We the students, faculty and administrators of the University of Massachusetts in 1955-1956 have been honored in seeing the first fulfillments of years of dreaming and planning. We have been new dormitories built to house the rapidly increasing student population; we have witnessed the beginnings of a new classroom building and Student Union which will more adequately satisfy the academic and social needs of the campus and, what is most important of all, we have sensed changes in University policy, a dynamic and accommodating force to meet the needs of our dynamic culture. As we view our campus and see the barren girders of its future classrooms reaching upward to the heavens, eager to be clothed, we realize that we too are structures, strong but unfinished.

Step right up and try your strength!

Must be trouble parking!

*Begun from a mass of Potential bricks
We are but a promise of
Future fulfillment
Foundation dated
With merely "The Future"
A base straining upward
And setting no limits.
Fog-soft impressions
And vivid-sharp dreams,
Classes that bored
And ones that inspired---
These are the things
That in sharing built us...*

As the warm rains washed away our winter blanket of snow, figures in familiar yellow and red slickers and brown trench coats sloshed through the mud to the Engineering Building, Liberal Arts, Draper and the "C" Store. April had come to our Amherst campus bringing the promise and warmth of Spring, the budding of flowers, and the budding of ideas. For the first time in University history centralized voting was used in an all-campus election of class officers and senators-at-large. The Senate took another step in the direction of more democratic and elastic student government by adopting a revised system of Student Government by-laws, new laws to amend our constitution and meet the changing needs of a changing campus.

No, it's not a still . . .

--- And they're not the Crewcuts, either

The established tradition of Parents' Weekend, when students and their families and friends have an opportunity to explore the University as a functioning entity, was transformed and its name altered to the Annual All-University Open House. All the departments in the school worked together as a team, their cooperation making the weekend a notable success. The mouth-watering aroma of succulent chicken floated from the banks of the College Pond, luring crowds of hungry people to the novel and extremely successful barbecue which was sponsored by the Poultry Science Club. Overhead, roaring jet planes were an impressive demonstration of our Air Force. Under the blue sky with its fleeting jets, the Bay State Rifles and Flying Redmen marched down Alumni Field in rigid and exact formation, while only a few steps away in Drill Hall, the charming and talented Naiads presented an original water ballet for their audience of family and friends.

Must have been a rough night

"Give me some men..."

Many of our guests travelled long distances from many states to witness and participate in the Twentieth Annual Bay State Dairy Classic. Others marvelled at the technical advances which were on display at the Annual Student Engineering Open House. Here wide-eyed spectators watched in awe as students exhibited new techniques in the fields of electronics and mechanics.

The Roister Doisters' traditional performance for University visitors added another success to the organization's credit. In the Spewacks' comedy, "My Three Angels," students portrayed a group of escaped convicts who made Christmas merry for a storekeeper and his family. The performance added even more enjoyment to the weekend for the Open House audiences.

Now, for 64,000 dollars . . .

April saw one of the most publicized jokes ever to take place at our University. The Chor-dette Hoax had its beginning when Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority received a telegram from the "Chordettes," the female quartette which had appeared on the Arthur Godfrey television-radio program. The wire announced a forthcoming visit from the group, since one of its members was a Kappa alumna. After much delay the expected guest arrived and serenaded the sisters. To the amazement of an expectant campus, the long awaited guests turned out to be four University of Massachusetts men who had planned the hoax and sent the wire.

"When the tide rushes in . . ."

Again strains of laughter echoed, this time as we viewed and voted for contestants in the "Ugly Man" Contest. Curiously enough, the proceeds from voting in this newly established event were sent to the Save the Children Federation.

The varied activities of Greek Week were a fitting climax to a very eventful month. Pi Beta Phi and Delta Sigma Chi won academic laurels by achieving the highest scholastic averages for sororities and fraternities respectively. On Sunday afternoon of that week the peaceful, sun-bathed lawn of Memorial Hall was crowded with people listening to the first outdoor Interfraternity Sing. Delta Sigma Chi won first prize in this competition. In the Intersorority Sing and Declamation, Pi Beta Phi again swept first place honors. The Greek Ball held in Northampton was highlighted when nationally known bandleader Sammy Kaye crowned lovely Jane Catron, Queen of the Ball.

And so, in a whirl of excitement and activities, April blended into May and the hopes and plans which had been dreams became realities as they came to pass.

For us at the University, May was a memorable month because its events were decisive in making 1955-1956 the year of policy building and revision. At a meeting of the Board of Trustees in Boston, two key administrative positions which had been vacant were filled by the appointment of a new Provost and a new Dean of Arts and Sciences. To fill the vacancy created when Jean Paul Mather was promoted from Provost to President last year, the Board chose Shannon McCune, up till then, chairman of the Department of Geography at Colgate University. An on-campus appointment to the post of Dean of Arts and Sciences, Fred V. Cahill, Jr., professor in our Department of Government, tackled his new job immediately while Mr. McCune would not assume the duties of his new position until September, 1955.

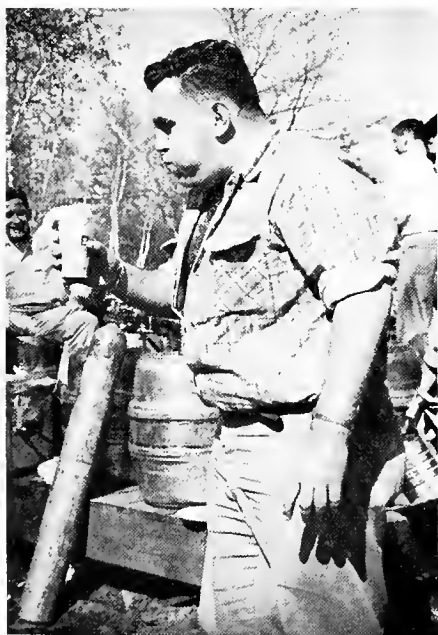

These two men would now be key persons in formulating policies and in determining the destiny of our institution. To them we faithfully entrusted the planning of our future.

We also paid tribute not only to our administrators, but to our outstanding students. These anticipation at the Second Annual All-University Honors Convocation ended amidst screeches of surprise and delight at the tapping ceremonies for the new members of the campus honorary societies (Sophomore Scrolls and Maroon Key, Senior Adelpia and Mortarboard). Extra-curricular activity awards were made and plans for a new honorary society which would be composed of students who have been outstandingly active in campus affairs were announced. Another important part of the program was the presentation of eight scholarships and the formal citation of university seniors who had been chosen for "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities."

The senior women clothed in caps and gowns then solemnly filed to the College Pond to float symbolic candles to women of the junior class who waited on the opposite shore.

Complete with cheerleaders, pep band and the Statesmen, the selection of Senior Athletic of the Year was announced at the First Annual Sports Convocation. Chosen by the coaches and local sportswriters, the top senior athlete, Joe Faucette, was the recipient of the Samuel S. Crossman Trophy, established last spring in honor of the man who re-organized the Varsity "M" Club. The trophy will be given annually to the senior who achieves letters in at least two varsity sports and maintains an above-average scholastic record. Other trophies and awards were given to the top athletes in winter and spring sports. Still more sports headlines were made in May when the University tennis team captured the 1955 Yankee Conference Championship.

Co-eds shed their winter ski suits, mittens and scarves to don Bermuda shorts and chino pants. Summer had come to campus. The trees were clothed in green and new grass pushed its way through the brown earth. Professors and students alike left confining classroom buildings to gather knowledge under the flawless ceiling of blue. On the libe lawn and the shores of the College Pond they sat, discussing Plato and Freud, or Einstein's Theory of Relativity, absorbing as much Vitamin D as knowledge during those May classes.

And everyone on the campus waited. Each morning as ten o'clock drew near, a hush fell over the University from the Engineering Annex to the Math Building and from the dormitories to the fraternity and sorority houses. All minds were sharing a common thought... "Are the Bells going to ring today?" One sunny morning the Bells of Old Chapel chimed loud and clear, announcing the arrival of Spring Day, a day of "Fun, Sun, Cheer and Beer."

The first All-University Picnic found 2500 students migrating from classes to an event-packed program at the pond. We will always have vivid memories of the greased-pole climb, wheelbarrow races, log-rolling contests and the battle of the jazz bands. The highlight of the entire day came immediately after the picnic lunch as the horn of the Blaskomobile heralded the re-appearance of Mettawampe. This bronze Indian statue, the symbol of the University, had been missing from campus since 1951, and was welcomed home with a deafening roar from the crowd. Riding on horses behind Mettawampe, dressed in authentic Indian garb, were two other symbols of our school, Dean Robert S. "Hiawatha" Hopkins and his companion, Dean Helen "Pocahontas" Curtis.

Suddenly the afternoons at Lake Wyola and Green Pond came to an end. There were no more bridge games, no more mornings spent basking in the sun. Now there were only books, notes and more notes. Finals had come.

June finals mark the termination of an academic year, and the graduation and maturation of another college generation. For the seniors, four years of studies, friendships and good times would soon be only fond memories. There were those making wedding plans and those frantically searching for employment. Others who were going to continue their education were applying to Graduate Schools; and of course many a senior would have the next few years taken care of by Uncle Sam. Although they were all individuals, all to follow separate paths after graduation, during Senior Week they were one, as together they shared in the whirl of activities. Senior Week began with the Senior Banquet, which took place at Liberty Legion Hall in Springfield, with President Mather and Senior President, Ro Reagan, as speakers, while the traditional Soph-Senior Hop was held at the Hadley Legion Hall, where the dance music of Syd Ross' orchestra proved a fitting background for a wonderful evening.

Alumni Day was brim-full of activities. Registration of alumni began in the morning, and a chicken barbecue was served at the pond, followed by a thrill-packed baseball game with Amherst College. Reunioning classes held banquets in the Amherst vicinity, and the Roister Doister performance of "My Three Angels" was again enthusiastically received.

Prayers for fine weather were apparently answered when Sunday, June Fifth, dawned perfect in every respect. True to tradition, however, the skies clouded over just as the Procession was forming, and graduates, faculty, relatives and friends beat a hasty retreat to the protection of the Cage. Reverend James Robinson of the Church of the Master, New York City, delivered the Baccalaureate Address and Shirley Tuttle presented the "Ivy Oration."

September--another summer gone; the arrival of fall and the latest additions to Metawampe's family. In a maze of tours, tests and entertainment, the University's newest class (with the Handbook as a constant traveling companion) was given a brief and hurried view of campus activity. The flurry of events ended with that twice-a-year headache, Registration, which was followed by a dance in the Cage, the only event of the week-end to which frosh were advised not to bring their Handbook. As a fellow freshman, Provost McCune welcomed the Class of 1959 at a time when there were "some important changes taking place at the University of Massachusetts."

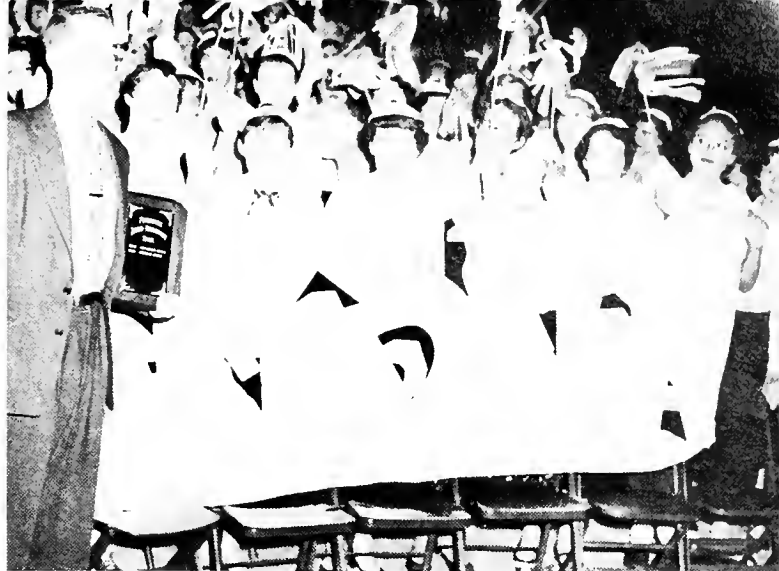

Eyes front!

Many organizational changes had in fact taken place in the University during the summer. The former School of Agriculture and Horticulture had become the College of Agriculture with three new departments added to it. Stowell C. Goding had been appointed head of the Romance Language Department, replacing Charles F. Fraker, who, after years of distinguished service, had retired in August. Maxwell H. Goldberg had become chairman of the English Department, succeeding Frank Prentice Rand who had resigned to continue as a professor in his department. Dr. Goldberg advocated evolutionary rather than revolutionary changes in the teaching of English. It was decided that, in gradual stages, the Speech Department would become a separate unit.

Well, I wouldn't go so far as to say that

Guess who won?

Nor was this all. The preliminary Master Plan of proposed changes indicated new buildings to rise west of the College Pond. It also showed the possibilities of a large dormitory area on Alumni Field, athletic fields on the farm lands west of the tennis courts, and a magnificent liberal arts building on the present site of Drill Hall. Clark Hall would be lost amid the buildings of the newly proposed Science Center. The only structure that seemed fairly certain of a stable future existence was Old Chapel. This Master Plan was to be carefully studied and critically analyzed before its proposals would be accepted.

New and bigger buildings were not the only changes suggested for the University. At our first convocation, the Provost made very clear his belief that all modification in organization must grow from a definite need within the school. He advocated a student-faculty committee to review the curriculum and other academic areas.

Symbolic of the University's transition from the past to the future was President J. Paul Mather's launching of his Freedom Crusade. The President planned a program that would eventuate in a Freedom Bill, passage of which would curb the power of the State Commission on Personnel which had been dictating the hiring policy of the University. The proposed bill would place all hiring in the hands of the school and its Board of Trustees, who are directly responsible to the state legislature.

The President stressed the fact that too rigorous state control had been a principal reason for Phi Beta Kappa's rejecting the University's application for a chapter. Other objections of the national honor society were our inadequate library and our shortage of classroom space. Constructive measures were begun to overcome these objections.

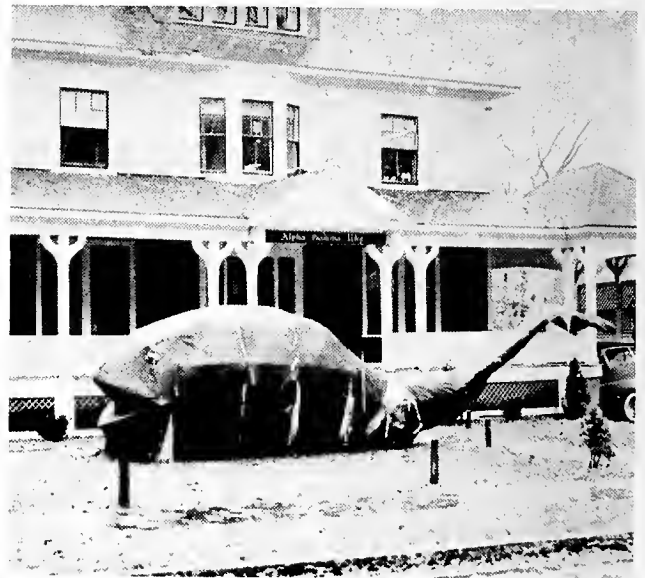

Now that we've made it, what'll we do with it?

It all started here . . .

As a result of our new quality point system of grading students, it was now revealed that last spring's scholastic averages had taken an untraditional leap over first semester averages. The cumulative effect of a one point rise in the University average was welcome news with which to begin the school year.

A definite University policy concerning honesty and discipline was for the first time printed in the Handbook. The code was a product of extensive research by a student-faculty investigating committee whose conclusions had been reviewed and accepted by the Student Senate in the spring. Dean Hopkins outlined the new policy to the entire faculty at its first meeting in September: "Honesty in all phases of academic work is expected of every student."

And went from here . . .

The campus was a fitting setting for the arrival of Halloween ghosts and goblins. The October 4th weekend found Amherst deserted, a ghost town from which nearly everyone had departed for Cambridge Stadium, the scene of the Harvard-UMass football battle. The eighty-car motorcade which followed President Mather to Cambridge carried only a small percentage of the spectators who were sandwiched into the Umie side of the ivy-covered horseshoe. Applauding wildly as Matty Sgan hung our opponent in effigy from the MTA Station roof, frenzied students chanted predictions of disaster for the Harvard "fellows." But the Precisionettes outstanding performance at the half-time program was to be the only point of pride for the Redmen supporters that afternoon. Absorbing more beating than the new Harvard bass drum, our pigskin warriors were buried, 60-6, before 12,500 amazed fans. The Harvard-Massachusetts game, last year the upset of the season, this year was the slaughter of the season in New England. Whatever the final score, the spirit of our school remained undefeated.

I want you to understand that I'm perfectly (hic) sober!

That spirit, though dampened by the cold rains and sweeping winds at the annual Homecoming Week-end float parade, remained unvanquished. Blue legs and red hands and faces were a common sight after the rain had soaked into the crepe-paper sashes and bows which brightened the imaginative costumes and floats. Before the procession reached the center of town everyone looked like he had been on the losing side of the rope-pull which was held later in the day. Yet the smiles and songs of the participants proved that no matter what the odds or the weather, our spirit couldn't be washed out. Although AEPi's prize-winning Whale seemed at home in the downpour, he ultimately left fraternity life behind to spend the rest of his days blissfully floating in the College Pond. At the Rhode Island football game that afternoon, Ramcy III, the wooly hostage snatched by two Theta Chi's, was our only victory.

Let's all go to the movies

Chain gang

The enthusiasms of October were not limited to extra-curricular life. We were eager to learn about people in other countries, to gain insight into world affairs and foster a more friendly spirit in international relations. Members of the Romance Language Department who had recently returned from abroad sponsored a series of three lectures to acquaint us with the life of our neighbors. At the opening meeting of the International Relations Club, John Zeender of the History Department spoke perceptively about political and economic conditions in West Germany. A program in celebration of the tenth anniversary of the birth of the United Nations, under the auspices of the upperclass girls' dormitories, was opened with a pithy talk about the U. N. given by Theodore C. Caldwell, which was followed by entertainment presented by the University's foreign students.

In conjunction with the World University Service, an organization which uses funds raised in America for the improvement of educational facilities in Europe, Wahban Hilal, distinguished Indonesian educator, spoke to us. Several days later, at the WUS Conference held on our campus, a group of New England colleges discussed the future of educational institutions in India.

Whaddya mean, you don't want it back?

On his first tour away from the continent, Montovani and his singing strings drew record-breaking crowds into the Cage. Professors turned performers for the "Faculty Frantics," the University staff variety show which officially opened the 1955 Campus Chest Drive. Eugene Putala not only wrote a large part of the script including many of the lyrics, but he also stole just about every scene in which he appeared. The dance routine of Carol Cornish and Robert Morrissey sent the audience into hurricanes of laughter. Even "Red" Blasco was on hand for a curtain call as he performed one of his most familiar duties. The funds raised by the drive surpassed the 1954 total, but the $2560 collected fell short of this year's goal by approximately one-third. Two Stockbridge groups won top honors, and Berkshire was the winning dorm.

Bowker Auditorium was again filled to capacity when Senator John F. Kennedy spoke about "Problems of Current Foreign Policy." The Bay State Democrat stressed the importance of military guarantees and technical assistance, a firm stand against colonialism, and the need for improving our own class structure in meeting the challenge of Communism in small countries.

At dedication exercises for the University's new $1,350,000 Engineering Building, Maynard M. Boring, outstanding scientist, was the guest speaker. The theme of his address was the necessity for greater efficiency in education.

The 43rd Annual Horticultural Show transformed the Cage into a floral paradise. Visitors from far and near gazed in awe at the huge map of the Commonwealth which symbolized the theme, "The State is our Campus." Next to the map, a revolving drum illustrated the four benefits conferred on the state by the University--instruction, extension, research and control. The Hort Show has been the largest student-constructed-and-staged production in the country. Replacing the traditional Horticulture Queen award, the title of "Horticulturalist of the Year" was designed to honor the person making outstanding contributions in this field.

And suddenly someone yelled attention . . .

The three Madwomen

In the annual interdorm skit competition, the Thatcher Caveman won top honors with their skit depicting life at a Paleolithic University. Lewis' production of "We Like Sex" and Crabtree's "Golden Girl" also received awards.

Competition was just as keen in the freshman elections. Fiery campaigning and volcanic arguments pre-faced election day when more than three-quarters of the frosh went to the polls to cast their ballots. In the Senate elections George Cole was again chosen President and Lois Toko, Vice-President.

There was a large turn-out of freshman women at Sorority Round Robins sponsored by Panhellenic Council. They came back to the dorms bedecked with name-tags, pinned side-by-side like rows of medals--and they deserved medals for all the tea, cookies, candy and cupcakes they politely ate that afternoon.

Operetta Guild announced the casting of the spring production of "South Pacific." Joan Bernstein, a talented sophomore, was chosen to be Nellie Forbush, and a senior, William Danaher, was cast as the male lead.

"When the sky is a bright canary yellow"--these words from "South Pacific" aptly described the bright glow in the sky as smoke clouded the night air and firemen rushed to Hatch Laboratory to control a blaze which caused nearly $10,000 worth of damage. The fire started in an overheated refrigerator motor and set University cancer and food technology research projects back many months.

Out of Phi Beta Kappa's refusal to establish a chapter at the school, there now came the proposal to form a Faculty Senate. Provost McCune announced that the purpose of the Senate would be "to discuss and legislate policies affecting the University as a whole." This was one of the many plans that were being formulated to cure our administrative and physical ills. We had certainly progressed greatly since our birth as a University. The growing pains we had been enduring would soon be part of our past--the future memories of a proud educational institution.

Christmas was still weeks away, but the spirit of the season was everywhere, infecting everyone on campus. There seemed to be an added note of gladness in the cheerful "Hi's" we called as wintry winds pushed us past the pond, to and from classes.

December was to be crowded with a number of things. Richard Keogh, the storm center of controversy during his short political career, would be defeated in the election for soph senator-at-large. The Freshman Class would sponsor the first Hoop Rally for basketball fans in the history of the school. The Class of 1959 would go through some hectic and exciting weeks crammed with Greek Rushing and terminated by Pledge Chapel for the men and pledging for the women.

Even mid-semester grades could not dampen the festive spirit. Everyone had a "ball" at the Military Ball, where lovely Judith Anderson was caped Honorary Colonel. Entranced, we moved to the music of Bob Batchelder's orchestra and listened to the voices of the Fine Arts Singers, a choral group consisting of 27 freshman and upperclass women that replaced the Harmonaires and Symphony Singers of previous years.

These voices blended again at the traditional Christmas Vesper Service and Carol Sing, where the President and Provost joined students and faculty in commemorating the season. On the other side of campus, at the B'nai B'rith Hillel House, Jewish students celebrated their annual Festival of Lights with feasting and merriment.

The holiday mood carried over in the first of a series of Senior Get-Togethers at the Quonset Club in Hadley. The "56 Mix" proved an excellent opportunity for seniors to reminisce about their freshman and sophomore days while in a glow from that extra can of beer.

In a more serious mood, the campus followed President Mather's campaign for freedom from the Commission of Personnel--a campaign that sparked public praise on the pages of many of the state's newspapers.

Another spark, this time a destructive one, once more placed the University's name on front pages, when $15,000 worth of equipment was consumed in a fire at the maintenance barn near the Homestead. It was about midnight when the blaze began and streams of cars, volunteer firemen and inquisitive observers poured on the scene. Also spurred on by curiosity were girls from the Abbey, Hamlin and Knowlton who ran to their windows to watch the fire-fighters and shout words of encouragement! Then, almost as spontaneously as the blaze had begun, swarms of boys entered Arnold House and Hamlin for a midnight tour of the girls' dorms. In the morning, the newspapers carried exaggerated reports of a "panty raid" at the University of Massachusetts.

A notable event of December was a grant-in-aid of $5,800 to the Literary Society by the National Association of Educational Broadcasters to produce an eight program series about American writers who have played major roles in earning European respect for American culture. The project, entitled "As Others Read Us: American Fiction Abroad," was keynoted by Robert Penn Warren, noted novelist and critic. Three other prominent writers who consented to record for the series were William Faulkner, John Dos Passos and John Steinbeck.

1955 was drawing to a close but the progress planned in this year of change and building was merely beginning.

After welcoming the New Year with unrestrained holiday cheer, we returned to campus with thoughts of unwritten papers, unstudied assignments, and finals which were looming too close for comfort. What happened to all those resolutions we made?

There was an aura of sadness all about as the news of the death of Ray Ethan Torrey, our noted professor of botany, came to the campus. In the thirty-seven years that he had taught at this school, Professor Torrey contributed much to the University and to his field.

Time for coffee

During January two national honor fraternities established new chapters here. Negotiations were begun to originate a campus chapter of Alpha Zeta, national agriculture honorary society, in the spring; and the University was installed as the ninety-ninth chapter of Tau Beta Pi, national honorary engineering fraternity. Harold M. King, president of the fraternity's executive council, conducted the ceremony and was one of the prominent guest speakers at the installation banquet held in the Commons.

The new year brought visiting lecturers and new staff members to our faculty. Karl Lowenstein, Amherst College professor of comparative government, lectured to us about the ideology, structure and dynamics of political parties; while J. Caesar Barber, also of Amherst College, taught Joyce and Eliot. John Gillespie was appointed director of our new Bureau of Government Research, which will study problems of local and state government in Massachusetts. Maynard Mack, Yale professor of English, another prominent scholar to visit our school, discussed Shakespeare's "King Lear" for a near capacity crowd at Bowker Auditorium. Donald C. McKay of Amherst College was the guest speaker at a meeting of the International Relations Club. An expert on French history and current affairs, he spoke on "France in Crisis."

So then I said to her . . .

All right, buddy, let's see your license!

Ay bane goot poy dis one time . . .

A major problem faced by Massachusetts as we returned to school was the deficit in the state budget. The result was an economy drive for remedying the situation. President Mather announced a $15 increase in dormitory room-rent to be effective in the fall, and a $20 increase in Student Activity Fee which would commence when the Student Union opened its doors. Recommendations for an increase in University tuition brought bitter cries of protest on campus, since the resulting income was to go directly into the general fund of the state rather than being expressly labeled for appropriation to our school. Students asked: "Why should individual students be required to pay for increased birth rate and for the replacement of antiquated buildings?" "Why pick on us?" Thus 1956 found us not only digging deeper into the soil for construction purpose but looking forward to the prospect of also digging deeper into our pocket-books.

More than a year's work by the student-faculty Committee on Honesty produced a radically new honor program which was tested during final examinations. An appeal was made to the student body to shift some of the responsibility for honesty in exams from the sagging shoulders of the discipline-weary faculty to those of the students themselves. Students were requested to report anonymously to members of Judiciary any knowledge of organized or premeditated cheating during exams. The goal of this unprecedented program was to provide a workable system which would reduce cheating and be the initial step toward the ultimate objective of a permanent honesty program for the University.

And so we faced finals armed with No-Doz pills and pots of strong black coffee.

A motley group, what?

And the Forum

It was February now and Winter Carnival time in Umie-land. A progressive institution was paying tribute to the Old New England from which it proudly claimed a rich heritage.

The weekend was set in motion with an all-university hayride which ended at the Commons in time for a spectacular fireworks display. Following the announcement that vivacious Joan Crawford was our new Snow Queen, a jazz festival starring the Spring Street Stompers, Williams College combo, ended the "cool" evening. Two leading New York model agencies had selected Joan from among five lovely campus co-eds and she reigned over the entire week-end. Earlier in the week the Queen finalists and their confined snowman had stormed Steve Allen's CBS-telecast, a prelude to their appearance on the WBZ-TV "Swan Boat" show. On Friday night eight hundred couples danced in the Cage to the smooth music of Tex Beneke's orchestra, amid picturesque three-dimensional landscapes of New England. The highlight of the evening was the crowning of the Queen of the Carnival Ball. During intermission, the original caricature of the "Umie," created by cartoonist Al Capp of "Lil' Abner" fame, was unveiled.

The climax of the Carnival program was the display of mammoth snow sculptures. Our prayers had not been in vain and Friday found industrious, imaginative artists re-creating familiar Yankee scenes from piles of freshly-fallen snow. Top awards for the greatest show on snow were won by Sigma Phi Epsilon, Chi Omega and Lewis Hall. Sig Ep's "Evening Rounds" portrayed a 25-foot lamplighter at work. The Lewis men molded a homey scene complete with rustic fireplace and overstuffed armchairs. Chi O's "Parting Promises" depicted lovers bidding farewell as they stood on a small country bridge. The event-filled calendar was rounded off by a preview of spring styles at the Fashion Show and by the Naiads' original water ballet.

We like to think that good will, friendliness and love are virtues which are with us all the time, not only on Valentine's Day. But the demonstrations held by students and townspeople at the University of Alabama against the admittance of Miss Autherine Lucy, a Negro, was an all too vivid proof that these virtues are not always realities. "The Crusade for Equal Rights," an address given by Robert L. Carter, Assistant Council for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, was very timely indeed. The Negro lawyer labeled six southern states "the hard core of resistance" to desegregation, the reason for this being fear of change in their power structure if Negroes were given equal rights.

The desegregation issue, as well as the linked issue of progress in the United Nations, was discussed in a campus convocation honoring Ralph J. Bunche, under-secretary of the U.N., diplomat and humanitarian. Dr. Bunche stated that he had full faith in the American way of life and believed it would not be long before the walls of segregation "came tumbling down around us." The presentation of an honorary Doctor of Laws degree to Dr. Bunche by President Mather was the surprise that closed the evening.

Other eminent men gave us of their wisdom during February: Hans Morgenthau, professor of political science at the University of Chicago, stressed the necessity of a fundamental reconsideration of our foreign policy in Asia; noted British evangelist, Canon Brian Green, another guest lecturer, spoke on "Religion and the Modern Mind"; and one of our foremost living poets, W. H. Auden, and three prominent literary critics made two more tapes for the Literary Society's project.

The University could proudly speak of honors bestowed on some of our faculty members. John Murray Elliot, assistant professor of animal husbandry, and Richard Haven, instructor in English, were among sixty-two scholars in the nation to receive Danforth doctoral study grants. Five other staff members were appointed to committees of the American Association of Land Grant Colleges and State Universities, while Maxwell Goldberg was chosen to be a discussion leader at the 11th National Conference on Higher Education in Chicago.

We could be proud too of our students at the University. An MIT hazing tragedy, in which a young student had accidentally drowned, turned our fraternities against hazing and caused them to adopt a plan suggested by campus and town policemen. In the true spirit of the month, the hearts of University fraternity men and women went out to those who were less fortunate, and pledges directed their efforts to collecting donations for the Heart Fund in the town of Amherst. AEPi pledges painted the basement and rooms of the People's Institute in Northampton. While the pledges of Sigma Delta Tau made periodic visits to offer companionship to the inmates of the Belchertown Home for Retarded Children.

Our athletes were making great strides too. In an 87-85 thriller at the Cage, an underdog UMass team put an end to the 21-game winning streak of the UConn Huskies. A capacity crowd screamed frantically as John Edgar raced down the basketball court, scoring the winning basket in the last forty seconds of play.

While all these events were taking place, the fate of our school as well as the future of University of Massachusetts graduates was being formed as Governor Herter told newsmen that he would veto the Freedom Bill in its present form. Although the governor voiced his approval of University control over the hiring of academic personnel, he would not approve a provision for control over all university employees. To overcome this obstacle, the administration planned to submit a revised bill. At their annual meeting in Boston, the University Trustees voted to maintain the present tuition level. They reaffirmed their belief that tuition charges should be held at a nominal level since an "overwhelming majority of University students come from relatively low income families where annual college expenses are sometimes a heavy burden."

Time had quickly passed. Winter Carnival was over and many other important events had taken place. All of us were glad to learn that coach Larry Briggs was well on the way to recovery and once more active on campus. As members of the college community, we were looking ahead to Greek Week; as residents of the Commonwealth we were concerned with the future of the Freedom Bill and of our University; as citizens of the United States we began to speculate about the presidential elections.

Nor was this all. As citizens of the world, we also turned our minds to international affairs. In March our third annual International Weekend was keyed by R.S.S. Gunewardene's discussion of the revolution in Asia and its effect on the rest of the world. The Ceylonese ambassador to the United States declared that "a Communist India would spell the end of the world," and stressed the importance of sincere understanding of Asia's problems in order to win Asia's friendship. In panel discussions on Europe and Asia moderated by distinguished Karl Lowenstein, each participant gave the view of his own country on the riddles of European unification and Communism in Asia. Meanwhile, as part of its program to foster a better understanding of American culture abroad, the Literary Society held a reception for Perry Miller, outstanding authority on Puritanism in America, and Renato Poggioli, editor of Inventario, the international literary quarterly. Both of these distinguished figures discussed Sinclair Lewis for the series.

To train citizens capable of dealing with contemporary problems, our schools must be staffed with competent teachers. A significant step toward the alleviation of the trained-teacher shortage in the Bay State was the establishment on our campus of a School of Education as a separate entity. The new School, headed by Albert W. Purvis, pledged itself to continue the policy of emphasizing courses which would give the teachers it trained a broad background in the subjects they would teach.

March also gave promise of college education for greater numbers of Massachusetts students. The Committee on Education of the Massachusetts Legislature approved a bill which would authorize the University of Massachusetts to establish junior colleges in vicinities where town and state would jointly shoulder the expense. The Committee approved two other interesting bills. One called for the creation of a School of Labor Relations on our campus, the other for a Highway Traffic Center which would make the University a focal point for traffic education and safety training in the state. All three bills had other hurdles to jump before they could become law. One important bill in March that passed our own campus Senate granted 33 science undergraduates funds to attend the Connecticut Valley Scientific Conference, where honor students had the opportunity to present their papers and gain recognition.

Campus life, never dull, continued to pose its ever-recurring problems. Was it because of some failure of school democracy that half of our co-eds refused to exercise their right to vote in the Women's Judiciary primaries? It was hoped by many that the newly formed Debating Society would not only win laurels for our school in inter-collegiate competition, but sharpen our consciousness of the duties of campus-citizens. On a lighter note, more than 500 sophomore were dined and entertained at their annual class banquet in the Dining Commons, while the seniors enjoyed their second "56 Mix" at the Quonset Club. Finalists in Alpha Tau Gamma's Baby Contest gathered with their escorts at the fraternity house where a Crabtree frosh received the grand prize for writing the most original paragraph about the baby of her choice. One of the most beautiful "babies" on campus, 18-year old freshman Jackie Bourbonnais, was chosen Miss New England Press Photographer, winning a free trip to Arizona to compete for the national title. Another winner was the greatest basketball team in UMass history, which ended a spectacular season with a 68-59 thrill-packed victory over Trinity.

Last but not least was the Operetta Guild production of Rodgers and Hammerstein's, "South Pacific." Bowker Auditorium packed in five sell-out audiences as the beautiful music reached their ears and hearts, weaving a tender story of love and a poignant lesson of racial toleration into the colorful tapestry of the play.

These, then, have been some of the memorable events of 1955-1956, a year of change and building at the University of Massachusetts. As our chronicle goes to press, the fate of the Freedom Bill still hangs in the balance; the face of our campus is criss-crossed by girders of buildings in the course of construction, their

INDEX

It is not a simple task to produce a history of a college year, but that is what the INDEX must do preserve for the future a record of events and activities, of groups and individuals.

The 1956 INDEX is, we hope, a logical result of a year of change. Our job has been made easier by the realization that just as history changes, so should the presentation of that history change. The 1956 INDEX is a new yearbook, from type face to fold-out dividing pages. We have attempted to incorporate in this book the latest ideas in layout and design, and the addition of many extra pages has been warranted, we feel, in the expansion of a Senior Section that lends more individuality to members of the graduating class.

This book is the culmination of a year of hard work by INDEX staff members and advisors . . . we hope you like it.

Quarterly

Continuing the policy of displaying the best of campus literary talent, the Quarterly was once again successful in presenting interesting and well-written prose and poetry by and for University students.

The chief innovation of this year's Quarterly was a new method of selecting staff members. Previously, candidates had been given a story and a poem to take home and criticize. The lack of any point of departure produced unsatisfactory results, since most of the papers lacked the concreteness and coherence necessary for good criticism.

This year's prospective members were also given a story and a poem to read. But a week later they were given an examination with questions designed to direct the candidate's attention to theme, style and literary content. The results were encouraging, as revealed in the stimulating prose of Erwin Pally, Edmund Skellings, Sam Kaplan and Arnold Gordenstein, and in the thoughtful poetry of Lorna Regolsky and Carolyn Poole. The Quarterly can look forward to maintaining its reputation as a first-rate literary journal on the basis of this year's publications.

Vol. 1 No. 2

In any type of literary endeavor, there are always a great number of problems to be met and overcome. This is particularly true of a collegiate literary magazine, and perhaps even more true of a humor magazine.

This year, Ya-Hoo's second, was definitely concerned with growing pains. The first issue was greatly delayed (and became the late late Fall issue) due to difficulties encountered in recruiting an adequate staff, and as is all too common in campus organizations, the bulk of the first issue was a result of the efforts of only a few.

Although tardy, the "Fall" issue of Ya-Hoo was discovered to be more than worthy of acclaim, and at this writing, the second and third issues are well on their way.

In retrospect, the past two years have been hectic ones for the University's humor magazine, but since Ya-Hoo has thus far successfully weathered all storms, it seems safe to predict that as long as the campus wants to find relief in laughter, there will be a Ya-Hoo to afford that relief.

The Handbook, directory of student and administrative activities, is published annually as a guide to campus rules and regulations, extra-curricular activities, events during the college year, and contains a map of the campus. Colored sections, added pictures, and an improved divisioning of the contents were three new features that not only enhanced the book's appearance, but indexed the contents in a more convenient manner. The book was divided into five main sections, two of which were printed on colored stock. Informal pictures of campus life replaced the line sketches formerly used on the head pages of sections.

The personnel section of past Handbooks was abolished, and all officers and advisors were listed under their appropriate clubs and organizations. The condensation of information in some sections decreased the Handbook's bulk and improved its continuity.

The editorial and expanded statistics staffs attempted to produce a more attractive, better organized, and more inclusive and factual directory of campus information for incoming freshmen and returning upper-classmen.

LITERARY SOCIETY

The Literary Society, a student-faculty group, was formed three years ago in an effort to encourage the development of creative and critical ability in literature. The group is accomplishing this goal through a variety of projects.

The Society's primary undertaking this year was the recording of a series of nine one-hour radio programs entitled "As Others Read Us: American Fiction Abroad." The project featured American writers who have played a major part in earning European respect for American culture. The series was sponsored by a $5,800 grant-in-aid from the National Association of Educational Broadcasters.

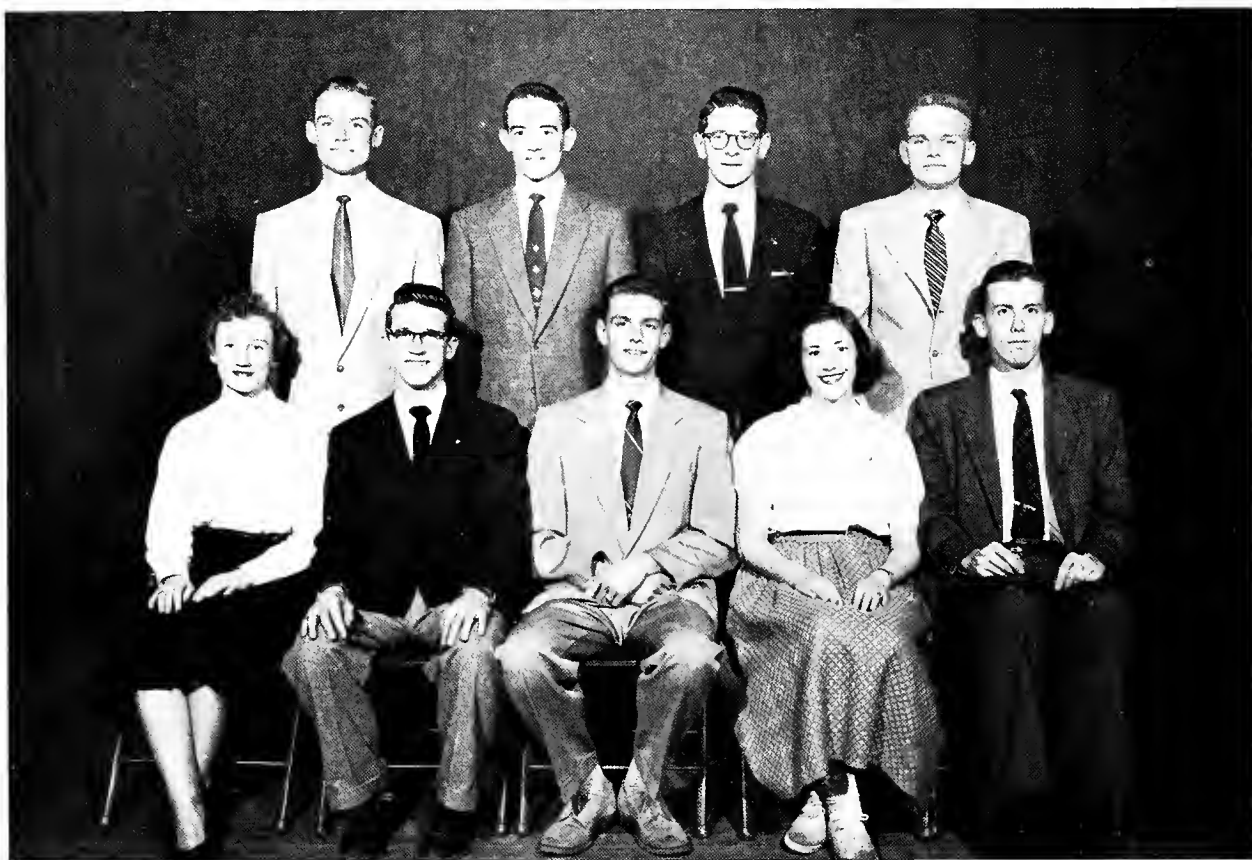

Each program dealt with a major novelist, whose impact abroad was discussed by two prominent critics—one American, the other European. Robert Penn Warren, noted novelist and critic, recorded an introduction to the series. The eight authors were Mark Twain, Henry James, Sinclair Lewis, Thomas Wolfe, John Dos Passos, William Faulkner, John Steinbeck, and Ernest Hemingway. Among the critics who appeared on the program were Richard Blackmur, Maxwell Geismar, Renata Poggioli, Perry Miller, Adolph Klarmann, Carvel Collins, W. H. Auden, Malcolm Cowley, and Harry Levin. When completed, the tape recordings will be distributed to high schools and colleges throughout the United States.

The first major project of this type undertaken by the Literary Society was last year's "New England Anthology," a series which presented some of America's foremost poets who have made use of the New England scene and heritage in their poetry. Poets who visited the campus to make tape recordings included Peter Vierick, Robert Frost, Archibald MacLeish, Richard Wilbur, Wallace Stephens, and Richard Eberhardt.

During its regular weekly meetings in the Poetry Room of the library the Literary Society drew on talent from the faculty, student body, and the Amherst community to promote stimulating discussion.

The Society also cooperated with other departments to bring guest lecturers to the University campus. One of these was Maynard Mack, prominent man of letters at Yale, who spoke before a large and enthusiastic audience on Shakespear's "King Lear."

CONCERT ASSOCIATION

The Concert Association as we know it today completed its eleventh season this year. It was founded in 1946 by a group of enthusiastic World War II veterans and since then has presented many great artists to thousands of interested listeners.

During this past year the Concert Association brought four excellent performances to the Cage. The series began in early October when Mantovani and his "New Music" attracted a record breaking audience. The November concert featured the London Philharmonia Orchestra under the direction of Herbert von Karajan. The Philharmonic Piano Quartet appeared in February on the eve of second semester classes, and the twenty-six voices of the Rager Wagner Chorale climaxed the series in a March concert.

All four concerts were enthusiastically received and the 1955-56 concert series may be considered one of the most successful in the history of the Concert Association.

FINE ARTS SINGERS

1955 saw the incorporation of this new all-girl singing group on campus. The Fine Arts Singers, consisting of both freshman and upper class girls, added a fresh touch to the musical world on campus and included some off-campus trips in its season of songs. The first appearance for the Fine Arts Singers came in December when they made their debut at the Military Ball, followed by participation in the Christmas Vespers program. In the spring the girls sang at a concert sponsored by the Fine Arts Council.

Under the supervision of Professor Daric Alviani, the Singers were directed primarily by student conductor Bruce Purrington, who was assisted by student manager Sara Jane Smack.

Quality was the goal of this select group and the resulting excellence of their work has established a tradition demanding respect from the musical groups on the University campus.

STATESMEN

At the beginning of the University year 1955-56 the Statesmen were completely reorganized by the Music Department in the form of a sextet to replace the octet of previous years. As one of the most popular singing groups on campus, the Statesmen, a blend of undergraduate voices, have travelled to entertain colleges, men's clubs, and other organizations in western Massachusetts. Warmly received at all performances, the Statesmen have helped the University gain a higher reputation among the people of the state.

Campus appearances by the Statesmen are enjoyed by all. The variety of well known and well loved ballads, spirituals and modern show tunes provides any audience pleasant listening. Members of the Statesmen this year were Ralph Dae, James Cogswell, Edward Green, Robert Larson, Lincoln Tumeay, and Robert Ames.

OPERETTA GUILD

The New England collegiate premiere of "South Pacific" marked another year of brilliant success for the Operetta Guild. A masterwork by Rodgers and Hammerstein, "South Pacific" proved a delightful blend of music, comedy, and drama in its portrayal of the meeting of two provincials and two cosmopolitans against the background of World War II in the Pacific Islands. "Biff" Danaher as Emile DeBecque, Jaan Bernstein as Nellie Forbush, Deidre MacLeod as Bloody Mary, and Norm Boucher as Lt. Cable charmed the audience with their dramatic and musical talents.

A highlight of the 1956 season was the return of the Guild to the renovated Bowker Auditorium. An extended stage and increased audience capacity added to the effectiveness and success of the production.

Now in its ninth year, the Operetta Guild once again proved its reputation for fine performance and effective stagecraft. Productions such as "Brigadoon," "The Student Prince," "Carousel," "Finian's Rainbow," and now "South Pacific," have established the musical and theatrical versatility of the Guild as meeting the highest standards of non-professional entertainment.

Attired in snappy maroon and white uniforms, the Redmen Marching Band functions as a show band along with the Precisionettes at football half-time maneuvers. Consisting of forty-eight marching members, and six majorettes led by Kitty Dunham of North Quincy, the Redmen Band has earned a reputation as one of New England's finest precision marching bands.

Highlights of this year's activities were the October performances at Harvard Stadium and at the Pittsfield Halloween parade.

The Redmen Band is under the leadership of Joseph Contino, Director of University Bands and Instructor in Music. Allen Michelson was the manager of this year's Marching Band.

CONCERT BAND

This select group of thirty-seven wind and percussion instrumentalists is one of the top musical organizations on campus. Under the baton of Joseph Contino the Concert Band's performances included the annual campus concert in February, a four-day tour of Massachusetts during Spring recess, an outdoor "pops" concert in May and numerous concerts for high schools and civic groups.

Although featuring distinctive contemporary band music, the band's program ranged from Sousa's favorite marches to selections from the Broadway hit "South Pacific."

Sophomore Robert Schulz was this year's student conductor, and the leading soloist, clarinetist Donald Farley, scored repeated triumphs with his performance of Marriesey's "Interlude."

CHORALE

This year marked the Chorale's ninth season under the direction of its founder, Doric Alviani. A select vocal group of men and women, the Chorale is one of the few major organizations on campus that is self-supporting.

The annual tour between semesters this year took the Chorale to East Bridgewater, Sharon, Brockton, Ware, Oxford, Bridgewater, and Hanson, Massachusetts, and to Putnam, Connecticut. Local high schools, alumni associations and church groups were the sponsors of these concerts.

Earlier appearances during the year included performances for the Worcester Alumni Association, the Northampton Lions Club and the Westfield Congregational Church. On campus, the Chorale sang for Dean Curtis' Advisory Council and for the Winter Carnival Fashion Show.

In addition to regular concert numbers, the Chorale this year incorporated into the program a series of one act operas including "Amohl and the Night Visitors" and "Down in the Valley."

As in past years, Chorale members filled many of the leading roles and formed the core of the chorus of "South Pacific," the Operetta Guild's spring production.

ROISTER DOISTERS

Providing interested University students with the opportunity to participate in all phases of the theater arts is the goal of the Roister Doisters, one of the oldest extra-curricular activities on campus. Roister Doisters has maintained its high standards of theater skills in widely differing types of production under the faculty direction of Arthur Niedeck, who was assisted by two former members, Doris Abramson and Henry Peirce.

This year, in recently renovated Bowker Auditorium, the group presented "The Madwoman of Chaillot," and again sponsored the Inter-Class Play competition which was completely student organized and directed. Roister Doisters then prepared for the production of George Bernard Shaw's "Arms and the Man," which was presented on Parent's Day and again at Commencement time.

Although its stated purpose is to foster knowledge in all phases of the theater, Roister Doisters has done an excellent job of entertaining the campus community as a "sideline."

WMUA

WMUA, "the student-operated voice of the University," is one of the most active and progressive organizations on campus. The station entered a new era this winter when it moved from the old tower studios in South College to modern facilities in the new Engineering Building. In spite of the move, broadcasting continued as usual. All home and away football games were aired, as well as most of the home and three of the away basketball contests. Friday evening's "Crazy Rhythms" request show, Saturday night's "Dancing in the Dark," and the symphonic "Masterworks" continued their long-established popularity. A United Press teletype was installed to improve news coverage, and a new program, "Campus Scene -- Campus Herd," highlighted campus problems. In addition to regular broadcasting, the new studios served the Speech Department radio classes, and WMUA's tape recording facilities were utilized for a Voice of America broadcast and a series of literary programs for the National Association of Educational Broadcasters. Technical equipment valued at $9,000, a library of more than 4,500 records, a modern nine-room station, and 120 active members -- these are some of the visible assets. The prime intangible is the work behind 33 weeks of broadcasting each year.

REVELERS

Daniels, Gross, Brown, Siegel, Crooks. Second row: Saulnier, Longhi, Sampson, Lee, Likowski, Enos, Toko.

This new honor-service society appeared on campus in September with a membership of six women and six men chosen from many applicants on the basis of scholarship, activities and skills. Its purpose is to uncover freshman talent which might otherwise remain dormant.

During Freshmen Week forms were passed out on which the freshmen were to list any noteworthy talents which they would be willing to donate at any time during the year.

The initial fruits of this effort were demonstrated by a series of freshman entertainers at the Revelers-sponsored interdormitory sing and at the freshman skits under the direction of the Revelers.

As the years progress, the Revelers will turn their attention to the service of the campus in general. This year, mid-winter campus skating party and other events bore the trade mark of the Revelers.

This was an experimental year, but the future will undoubtedly find the Revelers assuming a permanent position in University life.

STUDENT SENATE

The Student Senate is one of the most important student organizations on campus. Meeting in Skinner on Tuesday evenings, the elected representatives of the undergraduate student body have fulfilled their obligations to their constituents and to the University in a vigorous manner. Led for the second consecutive year by President George Cole and Vice-President Lois Toko, the Senate has been concerned with a number of important and varied tasks.

After early October elections the Senate made two internal changes which added order and dignity to the organization. These were the introduction of an agenda system to simplify and publicize the presentation of motions, and the offering of a prayer at the beginning of each meeting.

The Senate operates on a committee system which channels particular problems to smaller specialized groups. The most important of these is the Senate Finance Committee. Under the chairmanship of Senate Treasurer Roger Bobb, this committee was responsible for financially aiding the Winter Carnival, International Weekend, the foreign film series, Revelers, and the recently formed Debating Society, as well as for supervising the funds of the Collegian, Quarterly, WMUA, and other student organizations. Easily the most heavily burdened Senate group was the Buildings and Grounds Committee, which investigated innumerable student complaints and proposals regarding conditions of roads, buildings, parking lots, and sidewalks.

The highlight of the year for the Senate was the appearance of President Mather with his annual "State of the University" message. This address took on added significance, as in it the proposed "Freedom Bill" was fully explained.

It would be impossible to mention in detail the variety of Senate contributions to the betterment of campus life, but it may be said that as the University of Massachusetts looks toward a future of expansion, the Student Senate stands ready to keep pace.

MEN'S, WOMEN'S JUDICIARY

The General Court of Justice is composed of two parts, the Men's and Women's Judiciary Boards. As the Court, it is the primary purpose of these boards to render decisions on any Constitutional Questions which may arise.

During the past year, the joint Court also worked with the Faculty Committee on Discipline in an effort to stimulate honesty in all phases of academic endeavor among students.

However, the Judiciary Boards normally function as separate bodies. Women's Judiciary, under the leadership of Chief Justice Marylee Boyle, is composed of five women chosen through popular election by the women students. The women's board interprets Women's Affairs Committee regulations, reviews all violations of women's rules, and works with the dormitory House Councils in promoting high standards and in improving the approach to campus relations and regulations.

Men's Judiciary deals with disciplinary problems involving male students and handles all traffic violations on campus. Members are elected by the Senate rather than by popular vote. It is a duty of the Chief Justice of the General Court - this year Richard Steele - to administer the Oath of office to new class officers, senators, and other members of the Men's and Women's Judiciary.

ADELPHIA

"Nothing great was ever accomplished without enthusiasm."

EMERSON

Each year, nineteen junior and senior male students are honored for their contributions to the University of Massachusetts by being named to Adelphia, the senior men's honor society. This recognition is one of the highest honors bestowed on any undergraduate. Men who have, for the most part, widely varied interests and backgrounds are united on the common ground that has set them above their fellow students -- enthusiasm. They have enthusiasm to work for the improvement of our University and portray to others the proper attitudes and goals necessary for finer college and future life.

Adelphia, in accepting responsibility for various campus activities, demands from its members hard work and great responsibility. Beginning with Commencement at the end of their junior year, and continuing through the rollies, freshmen talks, University convocations, Campus Varieties, International Weekend and Honors Convocation, Adelphia is constantly serving the University. This year Adelphia assumed the added responsibility of sponsoring a program of intercollegiate debating.

Adelphia is not only a reward but also a stepping stone. It rewards work well done but calls upon its members for even greater accomplishment in the work waiting.

MORTAR BOARD

Isagon, founded in 1940, became the Isagon Chapter of Mortar Board, a national senior women's honorary society, in the spring of 1955. Mortar Board was founded in 1918 as a natural result of the existence on many college campuses of senior women's honor societies whose object was service.

Isagon Chapter of Mortar Board has become a dynamic part of University life. Its purpose is to "provide for cooperation between societies, to promote college loyalty, to advance the spirit of service and fellowship among university women, to maintain a high standard of scholarship, to recognize and encourage leadership, and to stimulate and develop a finer type of college woman." An impressive spring tapping ceremony each year honors a select group of junior women who have met the qualifications of service, scholarship and leadership.

In fulfilling their purpose, the members of Mortar Board usher at Commencement, publish Co-Ediquette, present an arts festival, and team with Adelphia to sponsor the annual Campus Varieties.

Mortar Board is represented on many all-campus committees and in most phases of campus life. The ideals of Mortar Board represent the mature thought and conduct to be found in college women, and the group's achievements serve as an inspiration to underclassmen.

BAY STATE RIFLES

The Bay State Rifles was organized in the fall of 1952 under the guidance of Major Kenneth Peters and since then has performed for the campus and for cities throughout the Commonwealth. The drill team, utilizing the traditional Cavalry yellow in its accessories, provided an opportunity for freshman and sophomore Armor ROTC cadets to gain proficiency in military drill in an enjoyable manner.

The group was advised this year by Lt. Col. Donald Eastlake, Jr., with M/Sgt. Edward Barringer as drill coach, Cadet Lt. Col. John Mason as Commander, Cadet First Sgt. Richard Baldwin and Cadet M/Sgt. Richard Boyle as leaders. An innovation this year was the selection of one cadet to attend the individual drill competition at Indiana's Purdue University where cadets from colleges throughout the United States displayed their skill. The year's activities were highlighted by a final performance at the annual Spring Review of ROTC cadets.

FLYING REDMEN

The Flying Redmen, a precision drill squadron of AFROTC cadets, was organized in 1952 and since then has taken New England by storm. The squadron won the New England competition in 1954 and 1955, and this Spring took part in the national competition at the Cherry Blossom Festival in Washington.

Entering contests is not the only purpose of this expert military drill team. Entertaining audiences throughout New England, the Flying Redmen have gained a reputation for perfect precision marching. On March 17th, the squadron took part in the annual Saint Patrick's Day Parade in Boston, and on Parent's Weekend they entertained visitors at the University.

The highlight of the year for the men was their appearance at Westover Field on Patriot's Day. The squadron was led this year by Cadet Lt. Col. Paul Baldasari and Cadet M/Sgt. Paul McEachern.

PRECISIONETTES

Although appearing at only two home and two away games this year because of inclement weather, the Precisionettes again thrilled University football fans with intricate half-time maneuvers. Established in 1946 as one of the first all-girl collegiate drill teams in the east, the Precisionettes consist of sixty co-eds, including forty-eight regulars and twelve alternates.

Led by Drill Master Fred Buker and Captain Shirley Johnson, the girls again stole the show at Harvard Stadium with formations designed by Director of University Bands, Joseph Contino.

In conjunction with the Redmen Marching Band with which they function as a team, the Precisionettes have established an enviable record of half-time performances.

Girls not present: West, Dodkin, Whitman.

RELIGIOUS CLUB REVIEW

In the growing community of the University of Massachusetts, where work, study and extra-curricular activity make up the life of a collegiate society, the religious element plays a large part in helping to transform the campus into a complete "home away from home." To take care of the spiritual needs of the student, not only the respective churches, but also the organizations devoted to religious learning and social activities, help to give the student a place in this campus community.

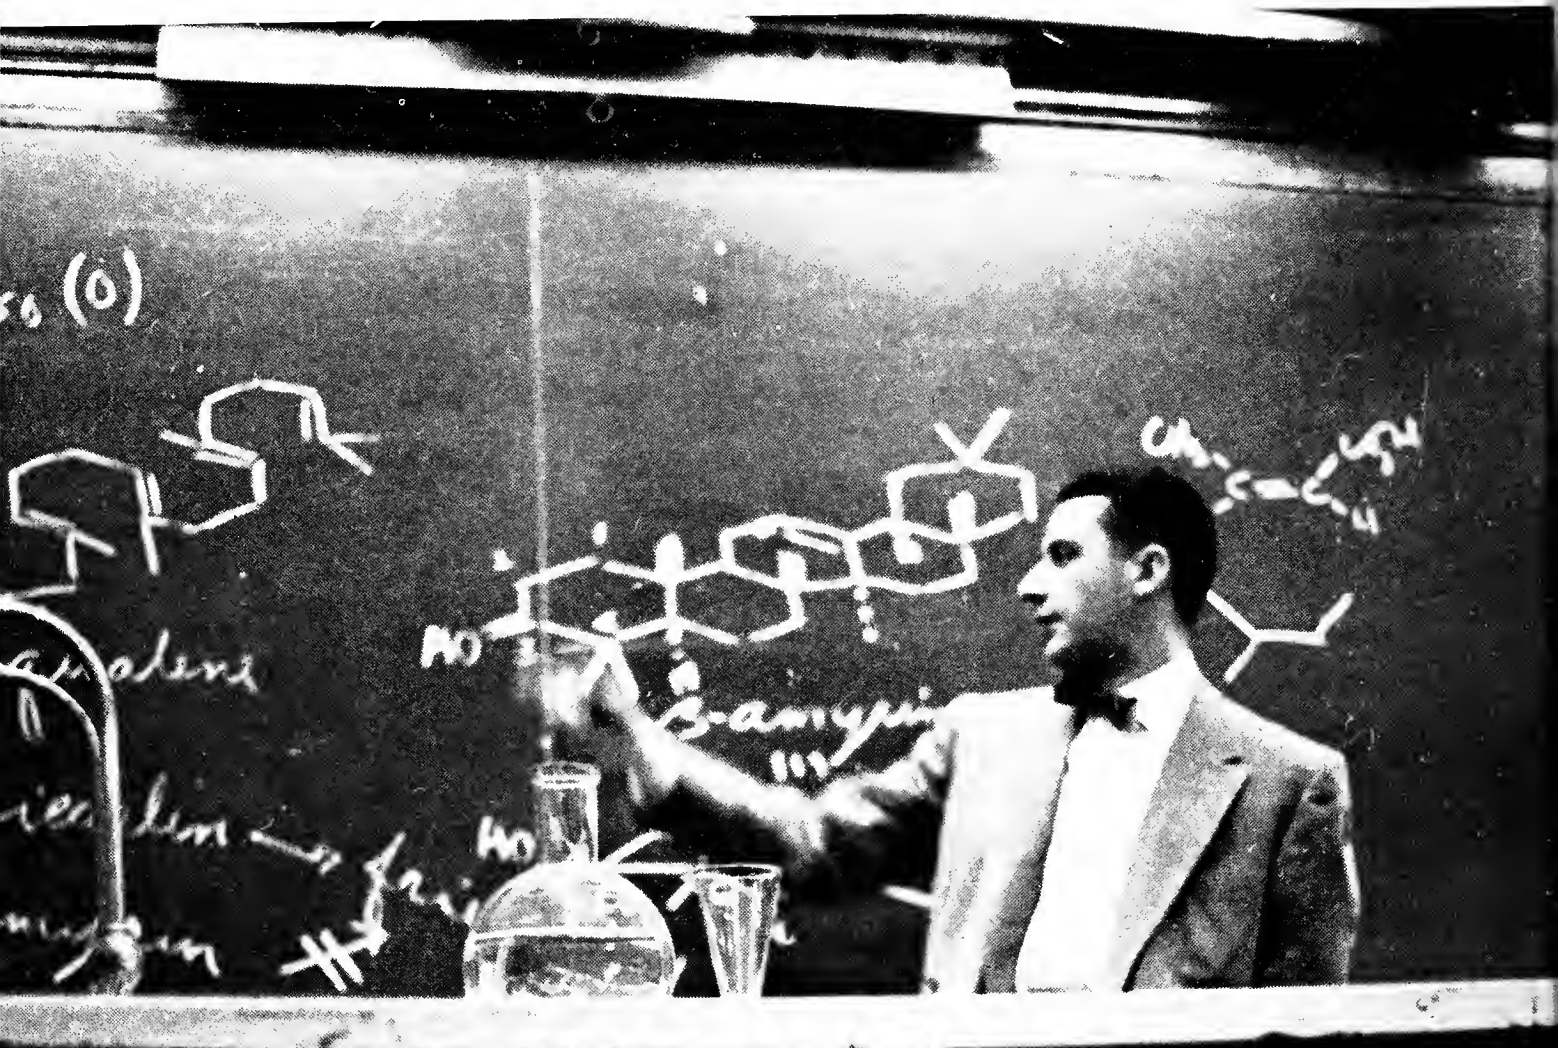

The various religious groups provide for the spiritual needs of their members by lectures, panel discussions and philanthropic work. One such club, working under the Christian Association, is the Massachusetts Bible Fellowship, whose purpose is to provide group prayer and Bible study, and in conjunction with the Christian Service Club to conduct religious education for the Jamaican farm hands in South Deerfield. The Christian Service Club also does a great deal of volunteer work in various institutions. In 1955 the Club concentrated on the Belchertown School for Retarded Children.

Beside the philanthropic work that various religious groups do, probably their most important function is to give the student a fuller appreciation of his religion, not only through discussion, but also by means of wider appreciation of other religions. In November the Channing Club, the Unitarian group on campus, and Hillel, the Jewish club, held a meeting at which a member of each gave the history of his religion, following which the groups discussed their similarities of belief. The Canterbury Club heard a lecture delivered by Roger Blanchard, Treasurer of the World Student Christian Federation, dealing with "The Episcopal Religion in Relation to Other Religions." Reverend Blanchard also addressed the Edwards Fellowship on the topic, "What's Unique about Congregationalism?"

Among the more enjoyable functions of the various religious groups during the year were the many social functions which each group offered to its membership. New in this area was the incorporation of a hayride, square dance, splash party and workday, followed by a pizza party, in the Wesley Foundation's program. The Newman Club not only sponsored its annual dance for the campus, but also entered the social field by displaying a float in the Homecoming Parade. The Orthodox Club, a religious group of the Eastern Orthodox faith, held a skating party on the College Pond and afterwards served coffee at Memorial Hall.

All in all, the religious groups on campus fulfilled their purpose of rounding out the student's life making religion and religious learning part of his daily life. These clubs performed a further function by helping the student on a large and expanding campus to maintain his identity by advocating those standards originally acquired at home.

CLUB YEAR IN REVIEW

Dr. Elias J. Corey, of the University of Illinois, speaks to the UMass Chemistry Club.

The smaller clubs vitalize the campus and lend each member a feeling of "belonging" to the university. Often they make one's special field of study a reality and thus enlarge the classroom and lab.

New clubs are constantly being born on our growing campus. One such is the Ski Club, which, on its second anniversary, tripled its membership and expanded its program to include skiing every Sunday for enthusiasts -- expert and novice. Campus Rumpus, celebrating its first birthday, planned to supplement its Saturday night donces at Memorial Hall with jazz concerts, cook-outs and square dancing. An organizational revamping has made the club more effective; elections of representatives are now held in each dormitory. Campus Rumpus hopes to begin a tradition of university-sponsored activity, paving the way for the Student Union. One of Rumpus' big goals is to plan on-campus weekend events so that UMass does not become a "suitcase college."

New clubs on campus include such groups as the Lawyers' Club and the Political Science Club. A reactivation of the Debating Society, disbanded since 1945, has brought forty-five invitations for debate from other schools and off-campus organizations. Long remembered as "the team that beat Oxford," the Debating Society has drawn up plans for the future which will include inter-fraternity, inter-dormitory and inter-departmental debating, symposiums and panel discussions. Sponsored by Adelphia and headed by a faculty steering committee, the Society's first topic of debate will be the question of "A Minimum Wage for All Workers."

These were the trail-blozers of the year. None the less energetic, however, were the established clubs on campus. The Outing Club, demanding of its members "a willingness to endure hardships cheerfully," carried on its arduous activities of mountain-climbing, speleology (cave exploring to you less hardy students on campus), trail clearing, roller skating, hiking and swimming -- all aids "to keep limber muscles usually incapacitated in an academic environment...." Kept busy also was the UMass Fire Department, consisting of students who help the town by supplementing Amherst's fire department with manpower from campus. These students answered more than 102 alarms in the town and on the campus during the year, and added a program of building inspection and fire drills to their other services.

More sedate perhaps, but no less active was the Dames' Club, a national organization for wives of students. Aiming to stimulate friendship among student wives, the club held weekly Interest Group meetings, which included sewing, swimming, drama, bowling, beginner's bridge and intermediate bridge. Along with these weekly activities the Dames' Club added philanthropic activities to its schedule, such as a cake sale in March to aid the Polio Fund.

Social and service clubs, however, make up only a part of the many groupings on campus. The professional clubs, too, have a definite purpose at the university, namely to acquaint the student not only with current issues and opportunities in his field, but also, through picnics, banquets and coffee hours, to allow him to meet the faculty in a non-classroom atmosphere. Outstanding in performing this function was the German Club, whose full program this year made it possible for its members to discuss various aspects of German culture and customs through speakers who had recently travelled and studied in Germany. These were Miss Eva Schiffer, who spent last year in Munich as a recipient of the Alexander von Humboldt Scholarship; Mrs. Henry Topp, who led a group of students through Austria and Germany last summer for the Putney, Vermont, "Experiment Abroad" project; and Professor John Zeender, who studied last year in Germany as a Fulbright Scholar. Other activities included the co-sponsorship with the Fine Arts Council in February of a program of Schumann songs presented by Dorothy Ornest Feldman and Louis Greenbaum.

Similar programs have also been offered by the French and Spanish clubs. The French Club presented Marcel Pagnol's four-act play, "Topoz," in December. One of the many programs of the Spanish Club this year was a talk on "Don Quixote and Modern Spain." Foreign-language movies and speakers from embassies rounded out the year's activities.

Not to be outdone in the way of activity, the engineering clubs have offered many speakers and demonstrations for those interested in the field. The UMass Institute of Radio Engineers and the American Institute of Electrical Engineers offered a color television lecture-demonstration by Dr. Cyril E. Hoyler of the Princeton R.C.A. laboratories, while the American Institute of Chemical Engineers sponsored a series of lectures on "Man-made Satellites and Space Travel." Each of the guest speakers presented the various aspects of high altitude flight. One speaker, Dr. Wernher von Braun, one of the foremost rocket experts in the country, is presently working on man-made satellites in conjunction with the United States government.

The American Society of Civil Engineers played host to the annual convention of the New England Conference of Student Chapters of the A.S.C.E. in the spring. The convention included panel discussions on curriculum and ethics, as well as talks on current engineering topics.

The clubs mentioned are only a few of the many organizations that fulfill the needs of the student at our University. One of the highlights of the year on campus was the Horticulture Show in which such organizations as the Food Technology, Floriculture, Agronomy, Landscape Architecture and Olericulture Clubs participated, displaying the vast scope of interest which students and faculty alike develop through extra-curricular activities.

Thus it may be seen that in the warm and receptive social atmosphere fostered by the clubs on campus, students are helped to realize the University's aim of making them well-rounded citizens looking forward to careers.

VARSITY BASEBALL

The 1955 University of Massachusetts baseball team, still shining brilliantly from its 1954 New England Championship victory, proved to be one of the finest squads in the East. The Redmen record of 15-5 equaled the all-time high set last year. This fine team, led by outstanding players and coached by the genius of Earl Lorden, finished second to UCann in the Yankee Conference and for the second straight year competed in the NCAA regional tournament.

The Redmen played a fine brand of ball all year. No other team in the league could match its tight defense and its clutch hitting. It was not unusual for this team to explode in the last innings of the game and then go on to victory.

The Lordenmen could also boast of outstanding players. Phil Tarpey, one of the greatest pitchers in the University's history, closed out his four years of college baseball with a brilliant season. Tarpey was a unanimous choice for the All-Tourney team and for the Most Valuable Player Award. Garnering All-New England honors, Phil was consistently a winner with a season's record of 8-1 including a breathtaking 1-0 one-hitter against New Hampshire and a 5-0 two-hitter against Rhode Island.

Charlie Mellon and Brian Wilcox were also outstanding players during the 1955 campaign. Both of these boys, a credit to the University, were nominated for the All-Tourney team. And no one will forget the playing of Captain Felix Wisniewski, Ron Lundgren, Bob Pagnini, Johnny Skyepeck, Gus Winters and Joe Faucette - all of whom contributed greatly to our winning team.

The season opened with a UMass twin victory over Maine, 1-0 and 2-1. It was quite evident that Coach Lorden could once again depend upon Phil Tarpey, for in the first game Phil faced only 23 batters. Joe Faucette, effectively hurling the nightcap, proved to be an able starter for the Redmen.

In the next encounter our usually tight defense broke down as New Hampshire scored three unearned runs for a 4-3 victory. But this untimely defeat did nothing to dampen the team's spirit. In the next game, with the score 0-0 going into the seventh inning, Charlie Mellon exploded with a bases-loaded triple to start the Redmen off to a five run inning and a four hit 5-0 shutout victory over Middlebury.

The Redmen were rolling. This victory over Middlebury was the beginning of a six game win streak. Joe Faucette, our "junk-throwing" left-hander, effectively tied down A.I.C. with four hits as the Redmen rapped twelve safeties to win 6-3.

The next two games illustrated the clutch playing so necessary for a championship team. The Redmen pushed five runs across in the eighth inning for a victory over Springfield. In the same inning, the team once again scored five tallies for a 6-5 victory over B.U. In this second game Pat Jay, making his mound debut, gained his first varsity victory. This action-packed game at Alumni Field saw everything from a double balk to a squeeze play, but more importantly, it convinced Coach Lorden that he had a real prospect in Pat Jay, only a sophomore.

The UMass team was still hot. In the next game Johnny Skyepeck caromed four hits to help down the "Saints" of St. Michaels 10-2.

Continuing its trip into the Green Mountain State, the team next travelled to the University of Vermont. Although the Redmen hit three homers in this twin bill, they could only manage to squeeze out a split decision, 4-3 and 4-5. The first game was high-lighted by two long blasts, one by Gobeille and the other by "Swish" Torpey. The nightcap, however, proved to be a nightmare. The Redmen, after scoring two runs in the eighth inning to seemingly assure a victory, were faced by a stubborn Catamount team which tied the score in the bottom of that frame and went on to win the game in the tenth inning.

The Redmen were quick to recover from this loss. Although they were out-hit 9-7, the UMass club made the most of its opportunities by defeating Williams, 7-3. Joe Faucette scattered Williams' nine hits, while Mellen and Wilcox knocked in three runs apiece.

This team effort, showing a good combination of pitching and hitting, was the formula that Lorden used for his next game. Mellen and Skypeck were the hitters and Torpey the pitcher, while the University crushed New Hampshire 11-3.

Phil Torpey, still in great pitching form, fleeced the Rams of Rhode Island to three hits and a UMass victory in the first game of a double header. Joe Faucette, however, was not quite so fortunate. Joe pitched a brilliant game, only to lose this heart-breaker, 1-0.

Our tight defense failed as Trinity scored two unearned runs for a 3-1 victory. The game was played under protest, for it was questioned whether a batted ball had hit a Trinity runner. No action was taken by the ECAC, however, because this was not a league game.

The next game featured Pat Jay. Although wild at times, Jay cured the Northeastern "Huskies," 3-2. Pat looked very good except for his sudden spurts of wildness, but Coach Larden felt that with a little experience Jay would eventually be one of the team's big men.

The University of Massachusetts was picked to play Holy Cross in the District NCAA playoffs. In this game, the Redmen, playing the same brand of ball that made them champions the previous year, stopped the Cross 1-0. The game was a pitching duel in which Tarpey, requiring only 113 pitches, struck out nine men while scattering four hits. The Redmen safeties came in the sixth inning. Bitetti singled to left field, took second on an attempted pickoff, and scored on Mellen's single. Brian Wilcox was the fielding star of the game with two great catches. The second of the two came in the ninth when the captain of the Cross team powered a ball deep to left field. Wilcox made an unbelievable leaping one-handed grab to relieve the pressure and UMass was in.

In the finals the University team played poor ball. This was definitely not the team that scored such a brilliant season. The Redmen committed five costly errors and lost 17-6 to Springfield, a team that we previously had beaten.

This defeat, however, did little to darken a superb 1955 season. The Redmen of that team showed a great spirit throughout the campaign and were a credit to the University of Massachusetts.

FRESHMAN BASEBALL

The Redmen freshman baseball team, under the able tutelage of Coach Curran, was able to produce a creditable 5-3 winning season. The little Redmen many times displayed baseball that was definitely varsity caliber. Coach Curran, a fine teacher, gave the boys good advice and excellent guidance, and it was largely due to his coaching that such prospects as Dick Lyans, Art Andrews, George McCafferty, and Don Ackerson were able to play so well.

In typical Redmen style, the team was able to come from behind on many occasions to insure a victory. Early in the season, the team, playing college ball for the first time, met a surprisingly strong Connecticut squad. At the beginning of the game George McCafferty blasted a tremendous homerun. Going into the ninth inning, however, the little Redmen had only managed to tie the game. Bob McGuire then sliced a single into right field, his third hit of the game. The team had begun to rally. Dick Lyons, next at bat, powered a ball for a base hit which enabled McGuire to score with the winning run.

The little Redmen were proud of their freshmen year and looked forward to the time when they would at last be playing for the varsity.

LACROSSE

Another year of experience is under the belt of UMass' young lacrosse team. Although this team was unable to wind up with a winning season, the players displayed the talent and spirit that will definitely produce a fine team.

Coach Dick Garber will be very fortunate in this coming season, for he has eleven of his lettermen returning. This year will see the return of the team's two high scorers, "Red" MacLead and "Mott" Sgon. These boys will be ready to dish out a bigger and more effective scoring punch with the rest of the squad.

Coach Garber was instrumental in the establishment of lacrosse as a varsity sport in 1954. Much credit is due to this young man who is now building a strong foundation upon which he will be able to expand.

Last year the team elected George Young and "Red" MacLead as co-captains. Under these boys, the UMass team will continue to fight hard as a team "Bay State" may well honor.

TENNIS

Under the able instruction of Coach Steve Kosakowski, the 1955 University of Massachusetts tennis team compiled one of its most impressive records. Not only did this team win eight matches while only losing two, but the Redmen, led by Captain Al Marcus, won the Yankee Conference tennis tourney.

UConn, previous Yankee Conference Champions, invaded the campus for the second match of the year but went down to defeat in one of the most thrilling exhibitions of the season. When the dust of battle had cleared, the Massachusetts men were on top, 5-4.

Springfield College challenged the team in an effort to end the UMass winning streak, but was easily over-powered by the Redmen -- a victory that gave the squad a four-game winning streak. Unfortunately this did not last, for Trinity handed the Redmen their first taste of defeat. In a hard fought match, the Redmen were downed 6-3.

The sons of Mettowampe bounded right back from this defeat to emerge victorious in the Yankee Conference play-offs. The team adeptly eliminated each opponent in the true style of champions.

Three wins over Rhode Island, W.P.I., and A.I.C. enabled the Redmen to claim their best season far quite some time. Coach Kosakowski has a good deal of talent coming back for the 1956 season. The UMass varsity tennis team can look forward to another great season in '56.

Facing strong opposition, the University of Massachusetts spring track team had an exceptional poor season. Coach Bill Footrick, a newcomer to our campus, was perplexed all season with the problem of a definite leak of depth. The team, however, did boast of several outstanding players, such as "Squeaky" Horn, Will Lepkowski, Howie Forman and Bob Allison.

The outstanding feature of the season, as far as the Redmen were concerned, took place at the University of Rhode Island during the Yankee Conference competition. At this meet two all time UMass track records were set. Howie Forman ran the high hurdles in 15.9, while his team mate "Squeaky" Horn did the two mile run in 9:39:4.

The Redmen victories came at the expense of Worcester Polytechnical Institute and Fort Devens. In Yankee Conference competition, the team finished sixth, while subsequent losses were inflicted by Amherst, UConn, and Boston University.

VARSITY FOOTBALL

Before the leaves had turned to a golden red, Coach Charlie O'Rourke had his players out on the turf getting ready for the 1955 campaign. O'Rourke had his staff strengthened by the presence of Noel Reebenacker, a part University great, as his backfield coach. With ten lettermen led by co-captains Dan "Red" Johnson and John McGowan returning, and with a crop of new players strengthening the team, a national magazine had predicated a 7-1 record for the UMass Eleven. The Redmen were blessed with an abundance of backfield talent. Hal Bowers, Tom Whalen, Roger Barous, Dan Johnson, Dick Wright, and Charlie Mellen were expected to perform well in the face of some pretty tough competition. However, all was not bright for Coach O'Rourke. He was plagued by the problem of a lack of experience in his forward wall. Veterans "Cappy" Kidd and Dave Ingram were expected to do a creditable job on the ends. Talent was available with such spirited players as McGowan, Dolan, Spriggs, Allen, Varrichione, O'Keefe, MacRae, and Devalle, but there was a lack of depth which was to prove damaging to O'Rourke.

The night before the first game, most of the campus turned out to cheer in the "Trump the Aces" rally. Heavy rains, however, postponed the game until the following Monday afternoon, when the Redmen whipped A.I.C. by a score of 27-13. During this display, Hal Bowers carried the ball 9 times for 3 big touchdowns. The first score of the game came early in the first quarter after a 62-yard drive. Tom Whalen, who was calling the signals that day, found a perfect target in Dick Wright, who scampered after a 30-yard Whalen aerial down to the A.I.C. 20-yard line. Mr. Whalen then proceeded to take the ball over on a perfectly executed option play. Charlie Mellen, the UMass "Mr. Toe," kicked the point-after-touchdown to give the Redmen a 7-0 lead, a lead that was never relinquished. This victory gave the team a boost of confidence for their next, and to many their most important, game against Harvard.

But all was to no avail. Preparations were made days in advance of the game. The talk all over campus was whether the Maroon and White could again upset the Crimson. President Mather, on the advice of the Student Senate, suspended Saturday classes so that all could attend this gala football week-end. School spirit travelled right into Cambridge with a 250-car motorcade. Harvard Square was bottled up by the heavy traffic and the UMass rally. The only trouble with the week-end was the score; UMass went down to its worst defeat in forty years, 60-6. However, the Massachusetts section could still smile with pride as the Precisionettes combined with our Marching Band and presented wonderful half-time ceremonies while Harvard dedicated its new bass drum. As the second half began, Dan Johnson recovered a Harvard kickoff fumble on the 29-yard line. From here Bowers bulled his way down to the 11-yard line and it was Roger Barous who tallied the lone Massachusetts score.

Before 6000 fans who defied the heavy rains, the UConnns played host to the Redmen. That day, as the Redmen fell to an 18-13 defeat, our chief opponent was not a strong Connecticut defense, but rather mud and rain. In the third period, after UConn had taken an 18-7 lead, Charlie Mellen charged 58 yards for a touchdown. When the Redmen had taken possession of the pigskin again, the clock showed only one minute and ten seconds left to play. It was at this point that Lady Luck pulled the strings. Tam Whalen executed a beautiful fake and passed to Wright, who tucked the ball under his arm and started running for the Connecticut goal with not a single player near him. Yet the mud and the rain were too much, and he slipped on the UConn 20-yard line. Another Whalen to Wright pass brought the Redmen to within 6 yards of pay dirt but the clock ran out. Much could be said about Allen, the UMass center who played great ball during the entire game and who called all of the Massachusetts defensive signals.

By October 15th, the date of our Homecoming game, O'Rourke was faced with an injury-ridden squad. "Cappy" Kidd had sprained his ankle, Bawers was bothered by his chronic bad knee, and Ingram, Varrichione, Dolan and Richardson were also hampered by injuries. Moreover the weather had been bad. A campus which had seen pretty Elaine Monroe crowned as Queen was flooded by the heavy October rains. By game time a chill rain was falling, and just as the rain fell, so did the Redmen. The champion Ram team's strength lay in a baffling pitch-out play they used with all of its variations. Before the half was over however, MacRae recovered a fumble and Bowers crashed over for the first Massachusetts tally. After this loss, the Redmen's chances in Conference play were indeed slim.

No one expected the upset 33-13 win the next week over the unbeaten Northeastern Huskies who boasted Phil Bucale, New England's leading scorer. At halftime the UMass club was leading 14-13. Early in the third period the UMass supporters began to notice a spark that had been here-to-fore missing. The tackles were vicious, the line was opening big holes in the Husky wall, the defense was tight. Dick Wright scuttled through the whole Northeastern team for a 91 yard touchdown, and a few minutes later he plunged to paydirt from the 17-yard line, following a Whalen to Kidd pass. From this point on, Northeastern was defenseless against the Massachusetts onslaught. Biff MacLean, a newcomer to the squad, intercepted a Northeastern pass and breezed 25 yards to another UMass score.

Only a week later, everyone at Alumni Field saw Coach O'Rourke smiling again. Against the Catamounts of the University of Vermont, the Redmen could do no wrong as they piled up an easy 54-15 victory. In this last home game of the season, all the Redmen displayed the fine football they were capable of playing.

Playing against Brandeis University in Waltham, Tom Whalen and the Redmen faced Jim Stehlin and the Judges. Stehlin had been heralded as the best small college passer in the East, but it was Whalen who impressed all with 7 passes for 201 yards. On a muddy field there was no score in the first half, and because of wet conditions both teams were resigned to playing defensive ball. Charlie "Mr. Toe" Mellen, however, broke the tie with a 15 yard angle field goal to put the Redmen ahead 3-0. After a Judge score, Tom Whalen received the ball from center, faked, faked a pass to his right end and right half-back, and then threw a long pass to Roger Barous who had sneaked down the left sideline. The decision was against the Judges, who were completely faked as Barous went 40 yards to score. In the final canto, Dick Wright intercepted a Stehlin pass and went 51 yards before he was stopped. Unfortunately, Wright was forced to retire from the game due to an injury received on the play. Bowers took the ball over for his seventh touchdown of the year.

Now boasting a 4-3 record, the Redmen had one more game left against a relatively weak New Hampshire team. With two seconds to go in the first half, Barous intercepted a pass, and with key blocks by Dolan and Tera sprinted 65 yards for the lone UMass tally. Yet the final score found the bewildered Redmen down 21-7.

And so ended another football season for the University of Massachusetts. With the loss of very few of O'Rourke's key letter men, and with the addition of new sophomore blood, we are all looking forward to a successful 1956 campaign.

FROSH FOOTBALL

The 1955 freshman football team played only one game here at Alumni Field this year. This team, under the guidance of Coach Hank Woronicz, exhibited a definite spark and willingness to play.

Unlike the football these boys had been accustomed to playing, college ball posed same new problems for them. Their biggest headache seemed to lie in the fact that they were playing together for the first time. Moreover, there was no pre-school practice for most of these boys, which somewhat handicapped the team.

Against Worcester Academy, the only home game for the UMass "Frosh", the team went down to a noble 7-0 defeat. Many fans turned out to see this game and to see a preview of some future prospects for Coach O'Rourke's varsity squad. What they saw was an aggressive team that left nothing to be desired in the way of spirit. We believe that the Little Redmen will add much in their future years here at the University.

CROSS COUNTRY

An increasingly popular UMass cross country team enjoyed a successful 1955 campaign. The squad, coached by Bill Footnick, a sophomore on the UMass coaching staff, compiled a creditable record of three wins against two defeats in dual competition, and a first, second, and third place in the Connecticut Valley, Yankee Conference, and New England meets respectively.

The "Harriers" of 1955 were led by the fleet-footed co-captains "Squeaky" Horn and "Will" Lepkowski. Before the end of the season, Horn was to establish himself as one of the best collegiate cross country runners in these parts.

The first dual meet saw the Redmen outrun the Dartmouth College team by a score of 25-30. Dartmouth had been favored to win this match. Yet the power of depth enabled Horn, Lepkowski, Chisholm, Hjerpe and Rickert to do the placing for the UMass team.

The Redmen were confident. Pre-season speculation had perhaps made them overconfident, for in their next match, Harvard upset us 25-41. The one bright spot for the Redmen was Horn's finishing in first position.

"Squeaky" Horn was still hot, and not to be denied. Away at Williamstown, Horn set a new course record as he led the team to a 45-18 victory over the "Ephmen" of Williams College. In this meet, Co-Captain Lepkowski took second place while Schwartz finished fifth. Mr. Schwartz, the boy who set the pavements ablaze as a freshman, was just beginning to show his mettle as a varsity runner.

On October 11th, the Redmen went down to a narrow defeat at the hands of a determined UConn team, 25-27. Moreover, this was the first time that Horn had been defeated all year.

After heavy rains had cancelled the M.I.T. match at Franklin Field, and after the Redmen had swamped Springfield College, the "Harriers" eagerly entered the Yankee Conference competition at Orono, Maine. The UMass unfamiliarity with the course enabled the team to capture only second place behind the favorite, Maine. Horn and Lepkowski finished in fifth and sixth place to give the Redmen an eight point lead over third place Connecticut.

Four days later in Burlington, on November 2nd, the UMass "Harriers" took a first place in the Connecticut Valley Derby. In this event Horn finished 2nd, Lepkowski 3rd, while Flynn finished in 6th place. In Boston five days later the Redmen, paced by Horn and Lepkowski, finished in third place in the New England meet.

We congratulate Coach Footnick and his team for a job well done. In the forthcoming seasons, we should expect to hear good things of a winning University of Massachusetts cross country team.

The Varsity Soccer team probably cannot be judged by its record of four wins and four defeats. Many things combined this year to make this team one of the most spirited, and one of the bravest, teams representing the University.

In the season's opening game, Dartmouth College, New England champion for the past two years, invaded our campus. Despite the strong UMass defense and the sudden flashes of play on offense, the Redmen suffered a 2-0 defeat.

Co-Captains and opposite fullbacks Mel Allen and Bob Abrahamson led the team to its first victory in a contest against W.P. I. The Redmen held a very tight defense in a deluge that made the field so soggy that the soccer ball became as heavy as a medicine ball. Veteran Lou McCarry sliced two goals while Billy Burke, a sophomore, punched one brilliant score into the net to give the Redmen a 3-0 win.

After a defeat at the hands of Amherst, in which Burke tallied the UMass lone goal, the University upset a highly ranked UConn team 3-1. Coming home from this victory, tragedy struck the team. This fall's torrential weather certainly had it in for the club. In Manson, cruising along Route 32, the bus carrying the team crashed through a washed-out bridge. Coach Larry Briggs suffered serious injuries along with eight of the twenty-two athletes and James Histle the manager.

The Trinity game was immediately cancelled. Abrahamson and Allen took over the direction of the team for the hospitalized Briggs. The rest of the season showed the effects of this terrible accident. Against Bridgeport, the once strong Redmen went down to a 4-0 defeat. All four goals were scored in the last period. It was here that John Suleski took over as a temporary coach.

Although their bodies were not in the best of shape, there was nothing wrong with the Redmen spirit the next week. Clark went down to a blistering 7-0 defeat under a barrage of Redmen goals: two by McCarry and Bauchiero, and one each by Burke, Golas, and Green.

By the next game, Coach Briggs, neatly tied up in a back brace, was able to view the Redmen hand Tufts a 2-0 defeat to finish the season.

SKI TEAM

The UMass ski team entered competition this year after a lay-off of two years due to a lack of snow. Most of the ski matches this year were at various school winter carnivals in the New England area.

Many individual team members appeared in events not listed for team competition. St. Lawrence and Hollister were the individual stars for the "Snowmen." In the Massachusetts Class C Jumping Championship, St. Lawrence took a first place with 125.9 points, while Hollister was right behind him with 124.7 points. A few weeks later, however, it was Hollister winning the Southern New England Ski Jumping event with 185.2 points in Class C competition.

In team competition, the Umies fared well. In a dual 25 gate slalom match, the Redmen whipped A.I.C. 386 to 439. Shortly thereafter, the Briggsmen ended their season by finishing third behind perennial champion Dartmouth in the Eastern Intercollegiate Ski Association match.

The 1956 UMass varsity wrestling team could not muster a victory, but did show fighting spirit throughout the whole season. This year the University welcomed Donald Jackson as its new wrestling coach.

The team was led by Bob Conns, who was elected captain early in the year. However, although wrestling is an individual sport, it takes a team effort to win matches. Throughout the year notices were seen imploring boys to come out for the team. But an apathetic University did not respond. In several of the "Gropplers'" matches forfeits were recorded and valuable points were lost because the team did not have members in several weight divisions.

The poor record of the 1956 wrestling team is certainly no indication of the long hours of practice and conditioning, and the great spirit of all of the members.

SWIMMING

The "Mermen" of the University of Massachusetts were characterized by an abundance of individual stars who combined to give the Rogersmen a winning 6-3 record.

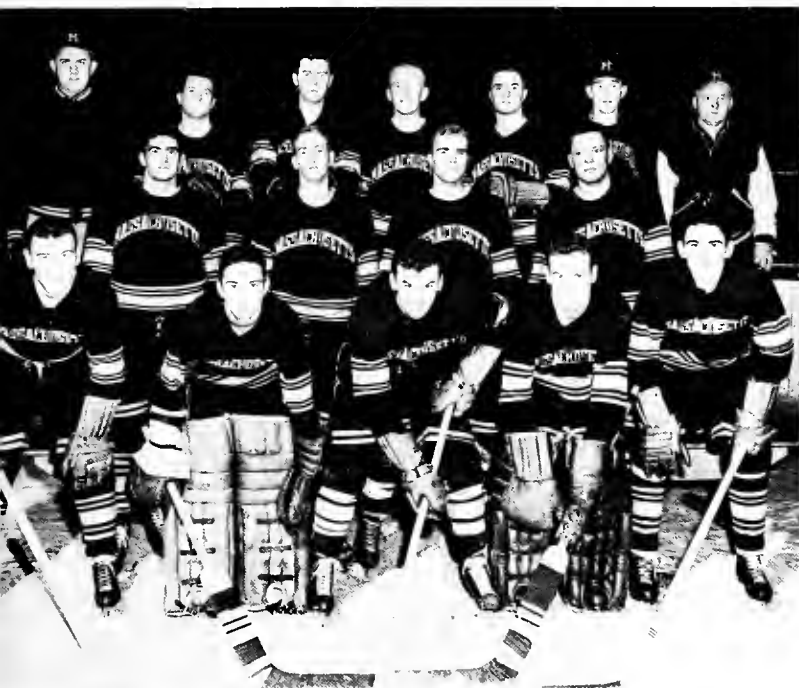

Sophomore sensation Dick Ham led the Redmen throughout the year as he broke records in his 150 yard individual medley special. Against R. P. I. in the second meet of the year, Ham took two first places and set a 2:23.2 pool record for the 200 yard individual medley, as the Redmen swamped 48-36.

Bianchi and Costello were the standout diving stars for Coach Rogers. Captain Lyons, Kimball, Baldwin, Morin, Doe, Goldberg, Carson and Stoler all successfully manipulated points during the season.

Although the team will lose many veterans this graduation, freshman prospects are excellent. With this added strength offsetting the graduation loss, next year's team should be as successful as this 1956 swimming team.

The 1956 UMass hockey team concluded a successful season on the ice in spite of the season's dismal record of five wins and six defeats. The many games in which the "Pucksters" lost by one or two goals are an indication of the need for their own rink on which the Redmen might practice. The only game in which the Umies were really outclassed was at West Point against a strong Army team.

"Next Year" is the cry of Cooch Kosakowski and the "Pucksters." The loss through graduation of high scorer and captain Russ Kidd, Bill Richards, Tom Forrogher and Pete Lombert, all starters, will be quite a blow to Kosakowski. However, next year's team, to be captained by ice oce Ron Lundgren, will have many experienced veterans on it. The spirit and drive of those seeking vocant starting berths will give UMass one of the finest teams it has ever harvested on ice.

GOLF

The University golf team experienced one of the best seasons in its history. During the regular season, Coach O'Rourke was able to put together an amazing team, chosen from a varied group of excellent players.

This year our golf team, in addition to winning five of its regular matches, was able to walk away with the New England title. Certainly the genius of Coach O'Rourke, and the spirit of such outstanding young golfers as Dove Damon, Bolton, Packard, Barr, Done, Lamphear, Getchell, Morrison, and Butler were enough to bolster a winning squad for our expending university.

The high point in the season come on May 13th at the New England tournament. Our team was facing some of the best competition in this part of the country. In all, nineteen schools were represented on this occasion, boasting many of the top collegiate golfers in the East. When the match was near completion, our team walked off of the links with a low score of 301, three strokes better than second place Williams, and seven strokes better than Boston College. That day Dove Damon advanced to the final round to win medal honors for his fine playing.

In the winter of 1955, the University witnessed the most impressive performances by any indoor track team in its history. The Boston Knights of Columbus meet was an indication of the power Coach Footnick had in the distance events. UMass, competing in only two events, took a first place in the one-mile relay and a fourth place in the two-mile event.

The 53-42 victory over Holy Cross was the first UMass indoor victory in three years. In this meet UMass tracksters set three new records. After Hal Richter threw the 35 lb. hammer 44'11", and after "Squeaky" Horn ran the two mile in 9:44.2, Pete Schwartz's one mile 4:31 set a new team record. Moreover Captain Howie Formon took three first places, the 35 yard low and high hurdles, and the high jump.

Despite the UMass loss to New Hampshire, the Redmen completed the last of their dual meets with an impressive 66-51 victory over Connecticut. Outstanding for the Umies were Lepkowski with a new 600 yard record 1:15.2.

The 1956 basketball team was the most successful in University history. A lack of height on the Redmen squad was certainly not much of a drawback, for Coach Curron built around his seven returning lettermen a fast-breaking offensive team.

On December 3rd, the Redmen opened the season against the Northeastern "Huskies." Playing a strict man-to-man defense, the team took an early lead and never relinquished it. This 69-45 victory was indicative of Coach Curron's polishing job.

The "Hoopsters" then travelled to Holy Cross to confront All-American Tom Heinsohn. Midway through the first half, the Cross jumped into a tight zone defense that was the nemesis of the Redmen all night. Heinsohn hit for 23 points for Holy Cross while George "Trigger" Burke and Jack Foley tallied 23 and 17 points respectively, but in a losing cause, 76-88.

BASKETBALL

The next three games featured the court magic of "Trigger" Burke. Having two of the Tufts "Jumbos" covering him meant nothing to George as he poured 25 points through the basket to lead the Redmen to an 80-65 victory. However, Burke's 25 points in the next game were to no avail. Boston University out-shot the Curranmen 85-77. George was still hot though, and at Boston Garden he showed fine form as he collected 29 points to lead the Redmen to a 91-73 victory over Boston College.

The Redmen travelled next to Waterville, Maine to compete in the N.E.I.B.T. over the Christmas vacation. Here the Redmen took third place by virtue of victories over Amherst and Bowdoin and a close loss to the perennial champ, UConn. This three-game tournament featured outstanding playing by Burke, Foley, Aho, Bartley and Frye. Unfortunately, Dick Eid bruised a leg bone and was lost to the Redmen for a month.

Once back to their home court, the Redmen, in exciting style, handed the Ruptured Duck trophy to St. Michael's with a double overtime 84-82 victory. And a few nights later, the Redmen shackled Springfield College and Ronnie Clark 58-53.

The "Wildcats" from the woods of New Hampshire, although they set three new cage records, were not able to move the Redmen from their winning ways. The New Hampshire men poured in 40 field goals, of which little Fran McLaughlin collected 19 field goals and 44 points. Yet this effort was not enough and the Redmen ended on top 98-90.

After losing to Williams College and then smashing Springfield once again, the Redmen suffered their first Yankee Conference defeat against Rhode Island. This game witnessed the return of Dick Eid to the lineup; but more important, it definitely proved Dave Bartley's right to a starting position. This little man, by his continual playmaking and general court finesse, was one of the bright sparks in the Redmen's fire.

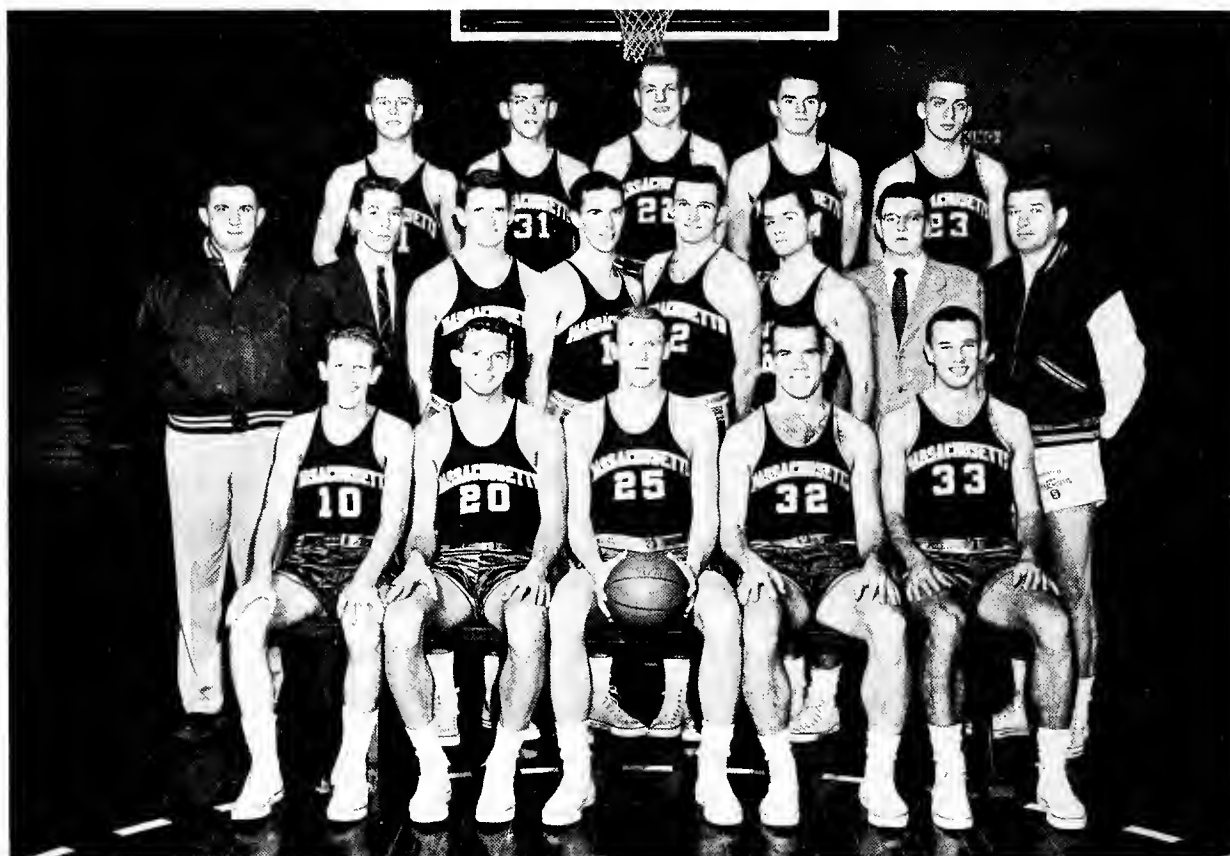

From here on, the Redmen played championship ball. The "Catamounts" of Vermont were the victims of a Foley, Aha and Bartley massacre, 78-58. The Redmen then took two quick victories over Colby and Maine. In these two games, Dick Eid tied the UMass record with 12 consecutive foul shots.

It was with a 3-1 Conference record that UMass faced Champion UCann. A victory over Connecticut and subsequent wins in Yankee Conference play would give the Redmen a 5-1 record as opposed to UCann's 6-1 slate. In the most exciting home game of the year, the Curranment broke Connecticut's 21 game win streak with an 87-85 victory. An even distribution of points indicated the tremendous effort that the Redmen displayed that night.

Going into the final game of the season, George Burke was only 38 points from the University scoring record. Moreover, after three years of varsity playing, Captain Paul Aho was listed 3rd in UMass scoring history. Yet it was the sensational Jack Foley with 32 points who led the UMass team to a 68-59 victory over Trinity. With this win, the most successful basketball team in our history closed out the season with an amazing 17-6 record.

FROSH BASKETBALL

The little Redmen "Hoapsters" under the able tutelage of Coach Chet Gladchuk compiled an excellent season's record of ten wins and four defeats. One of the contributing factors to the team's success was the addition of some good height. This was certainly evident on December 6th when the little Redmen trounced perennial powerhouse Holy Cross 63-48.

In terms of future prospects for the varsity club, the little "Hoapsters" have much to offer. Ned "Trigger" Larkin is a sure bet to take a guard berth on the varsity. His outside shooting and playmaking were a constant impetus to the 1956 team. Moreover, outstanding play was exhibited by the freshman tall men Norm Parter, Al Naedelle and Joe Kaezela. Rounding out the frosh team was eyepleasing guard "Mickey" McLaughlin, who with Larkin directed the Redmen attack. These boys should help fill some vacant spots on the varsity.

NAIADS

Thirty-four graceful aquatic ballerinas comprise the Naiads, the University of Massachusetts Synchronized Swimming Club. These girls were carefully selected from many applicants on the basis of swimming ability. The group provides a training class of Junior Naiads, which included twelve freshman girls chosen in the fall. The freshman group practiced separately from the regular club until May when it was integrated with the "varsity" Naiads.

The beautiful 1956 shows for Winter Carnival and Open House were the results of long hours of practice. These shows were student written, directed, and costumed under the supervision of Miss Wallace of the Women's Physical Education Department. It was lovely to see these girls swimming in groups or in tandem to music.

The Naiads also participated in demonstrations with similar clubs at other schools. This year's activities were highlighted by a trip to Wheaton College to attend a Synchronized Swimming Symposium.

WOMEN'S ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

The purpose of the Women's Athletic Association is to provide more opportunity for participation in sports by our women. The W. A. A. Board consists of seventeen women students and the faculty of the Women's Physical Education Staff.

The awards are divided into three sections. The Participation Award is presented to the dormitory or sorority which has attained the highest percentage of participation in W. A. A. sports throughout the year. The Intramural Tournament Award is presented to the dormitory or sorority which has accumulated the highest number of points in the various women's sports. At the end of the year, seniors who have demonstrated outstanding service or participation are named to the W. A. A. Honor Group.

Throughout the year the W. A. A. organizes playdays. These enable members of the association to participate in sports with other colleges as well as their own.

The big "bullet" for the Umies this year was Rex Baker, who was easily the best shot in this part of the country. In the championship match this year, Baker was awarded all three individual trophies, and in addition, made the All-American team.

RIFLE TEAM

The UMass A.F.R.O.T.C. Rifle team had a very successful season under its new coach, Sgt. James Bradley. Playing matches by mail, the Redmen won eight of their eleven postal matches with teams from all over the country. Moreover, in the Hearst Trophy Match the Umies were ranked fourth in New England.

This year the team's leaders were Captain John Loftus, who averaged a strong 185 out of a possible 200 points, and Arthur Peck, who was the team's high scorer with a 190 average.

INTRAMURAL SPORTS

Once again, as in past years, the 1955 intramural softball competition was very exciting. At every game there were many spectators and, as usual, friendly tempers were aroused. Before the end of the softball season, the race for places in Inter-Fraternity Competition would be very close, the outcome of that race to be decided by the results of the softball competition.

At the end of the regular season, Sig Ep had won the fraternity league, and A E Pi had tied Phi Sig for second place. Before the second-place playoff, the Sig Eps had taken a first place in I.F.C. competition; but if A E Pi could beat Phi Sig in the playoff and thus gain second place, then the Pi boys would tie for first place in the year's fraternity competition. The playoff was a hard fought game, played before the eyes of numerous spectators. Several times the lead changed hands, but with the final strike, the "Apes" had won a split decision 7-6.

In the championship game, Sigma Phi Epsilon defeated the Military team. Handicapped by age, which incidently caused many aches and pains, the joint forces of the army and air force were not enough to stop the enemy: the boys in the red suspenders.

The opening of the 1955 Intramural Football League was the beginning of the 1955-1956 I.F.C. competition for the fraternities. The tremendous cooperation on the part of the University administration, and the responsiveness of the Inter-Fraternity Council made the first place award a ripe fruit to be picked.

Early in the fall, every fraternity was eagerly practicing its maneuvers for the season. However, it was a determined Sigma Phi Epsilon, capitalizing upon a severe passing attack, that nosed out Theta Chi for the Fraternity League Championship. This year the annual "Bowl" game between a winning A E Pi and T E P was very exciting. But the Sig Ep-Theta Chi game was the highlight of the season. A last minute touchdown by the Sig Eps was the crucial play enabling them to win by one point.

The Old Tads, after winning the Independent League, defeated Mills, the Dormitory League Champions. This meant that the finals would see Sig Ep pitted against the Old Tads. Sigma Phi Epsilon completed its most successful football season by emerging as the victors.

Each winter, the competition among the fraternities is particularly keen in two sports, basketball and bowling. Unfortunately, printing deadlines have made it impossible to give full coverage to the winter intramural sports program.

In bowling, the I.F.C. has set up a simple set of rules. Each team consists of four bowlers. A match consists of three games, and the high pinfall per game is worth one point. The total high pinfall in the match is also worth one point. Thus a team can pick up a possible four points each match.

A E Pi has been perennial bowling champion. Ever since the league has been in existence, the Pi boys have taken a first award. However, this year the "Apes" have met some pretty rough competition. Either Q.T.V., L.C.A., or K.S. could this year dethrone A E Pi. As of mid-March, all of these teams were fighting for first division honors. At every match, the tension was high and the spectators many. A missed pin in any game could mean the loss of a match.

The intramural basketball program consisted this year of four leagues. The most exciting was the Fraternity League, although the Independent, the Dormitory A, and the Dormitory B still had their share of excitement.

The Fraternity League, like the Bowling League, has its perennial champions. Lambda Chi Alpha had been unbeaten, as the INDEX went to press, in thirty games; L.C.A. had a 6-0 record; but tied with them was Theta Chi, and close on their heels was Tau Epsilon Phi with a 6-1 record, and Q.T.V. with a 5-1 record.

Certainly any team in the league may be able to pull a surprise victory over one of the leaders. This is indicative of the wonderful excitement of the winter intramural program.

DORM LIFE

MEN'S DORMS

The core of college life, the dormitories, were beehives of activity this year. It was in their crowded rec rooms and bustling corridors that such evening courses as Bridge No. 56, Ping Pong No. 19, and Bull Sessions No. 29 supplemented and enriched knowledge gained in lectures and reading assignments. These were the lessons of good fellowship and cooperation, invaluable and precious characteristics to be cultivated and cherished.

The mole frosh joined hands with their sisters in the dorms and sponsored the successful Frosh Frolics and Interdorm Skit Competition in which the Thatcher Cavemen and the Arnold co-eds won top honors. Those freshmen really kept the Revelers on their toes during the competition.

Winter Carnival Weekend provided another excellent opportunity for the men of our campus to use their artistic and creative talents. They made Olde New England come alive from inanimate snow. The Lewis men molded a domestic scene, complete with fireplace and overstuffed armchairs, to place first among men's dorms for snow sculptures.

A homey scene such as that could be seen inside as well as outside the male dorms this year as the boys spent many relaxing and enjoyable evenings "at home." Mills and Brooks as well as others sponsored a series of outstanding movies for their boarders. For the nominal fee of 25¢, such films as "The Desert Song," "Call Me Madame," and the "Glen Miller Story" could be viewed. All the comforts of home, but no popcorn.

New ideas were certainly popping on top of the hill as Greenough and Chadbourne initiated plans for an Interdorm House Council. The Council is composed of the President, Vice-President, Treasurer and Secretary of each dorm as well as their senate representatives, faculty residents and the floor counsellors. This group meets every second week to discuss rules and regulations, financial matters and dormitory policies.

As the years come and go, so do the residents of the men's dorms, who have affectionately nicknamed their abodes "The Crackerboxes," and the "Cinder Blocks." But the sound of agitated voices engrossed in a bull session as the clock on Old Chapel's tower strikes 2 A.M., and the pounding of typewriter keys in the wee hours of the morning clicking out those last pages of that term paper--these will be unchanged by the years, for they are the pulse beat of the heart of a university.

WOMEN'S DORMS

The Women's Dormitories have been buzzing hives of activity this year.

Arnold monopolized the beauty market, boasting the Military Ball Queen, two members of her court, as well as two girls of the Winter Carnival Court.

The girls sponsored dorm breakfasts and suppers, and Faculty Coffee Hours. They also held a program of dorm dances, culminating in December with the "Snowflake Whirl," a formal dance held jointly with the boys of Baker. The "Four Freshmen" provided the music, and the couples danced against a sky-blue background dotted with snowflakes.

Crabtree copped the competition laurels for the year. They started out by winning first prize in the Freshman Interdorm Sing, and came in second in the Interdorm Skits. In the All-Campus Swimming Competition for women they emerged, dripping but triumphant, in first place.

The frosh had a varied social program, including dorm suppers and dances. Their chief social event was the delightful Christmas Formal, "The Skater's Waltz."

The warm, homey atmosphere of the Abbey was emphasized by numerous social get-togethers. At a very pleasant coffee-hour a girl who had lived in Hawaii showed slides of the country, and a dorm supper was cooked under the supervision of a guest from Indonesia. The girls also sponsored a highly successful dorm dance.

Hamlin displayed great versatility, their program ranging from a Welcome Party, thrown by the old Hamlinites for the newcomers, to a Literary Society reception for John Dos Passas. For Halloween they held a Veterans' Dance, and on United Nations weekend they had Open House, with a panel discussion group and entertainment from various countries. Back again on the cultural line, they sponsored a dramatic reading by Miss Philips of Waltham's Community Players. In addition, they contributed Miss Football and the Winter Carnival Queen to the campus.

Knowlton sparkled with parties this year: music hours - melody accompanied by the crunching of popcorn, a hilarious Halloween costume party, a gay pizza party, and an elaborate Christmas gathering featuring the Statesmen, caroling, ice cream and presents. In October, the girls held a reception for the McCunes and their guest, a professor from Indonesia.

This fall Leach acquired the navel charm of a bilingual atmosphere when the French House moved into its new home. In November, a third cosmopolitan influence was added - the madame and her girls gave a pizza party for veterans as candles, flickering in Chianti bottles, red and white checkered tablecloths and hot pizza combined to create a Roman Holiday. The highlight of the year came when Leach was the only women's dorm to win an award in the Winter Carnival Snow Sculptures. The Leach upperclassmen won third prize with their entry "A Couple of Old Fashions." All the dorms found time in their busy schedules to send Christmas dinners and clothes to needy families, sponsor health panels, and arrange faculty-student discussion groups during Religious Embassy Week.

COMMUTERS

Commuters are a brand of people found in class rooms, in the C-store, in the snack bar -- but most of all in Mem Hall.

They came to campus in the morning, and some leave after their classes are over. An increasing number, however, remain to take part in many and varied campus activities.

Commuters are active in the Student Senate, Raister Daisters, Collegian, Handbook and INDEX to mention just a few of their interests. Organized by the Commuters' Club, their interests are continually spreading.

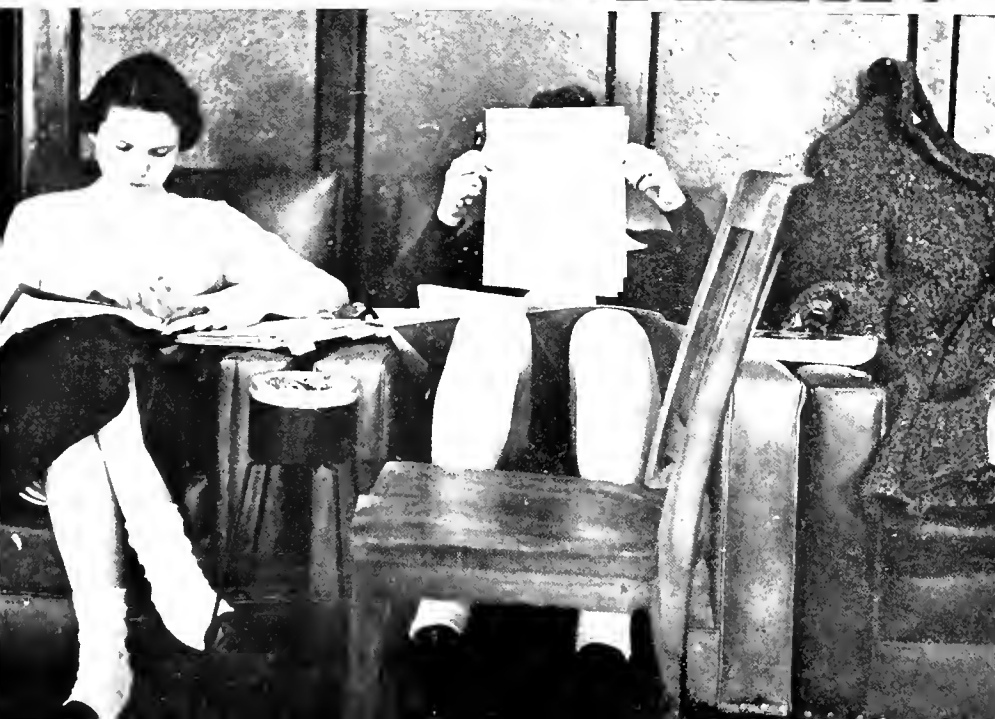

Anyone entering Mem Hall can't help but notice their spirit. It's a rare day when there aren't several card games going, along with a game or two of billiards and ping pong, while the shiny, new juke box plays tune after tune.

More and more the campus is coming to realize that commuters aren't just a group of students who come in the morning, go to classes, and leave. They are making themselves known both scholastically and activity-wise.

Each year a larger and larger number of commuters are joining fraternities and sororities and spending more time on campus to help with Greek events.

Starting off the year with a "Get Acquainted" tea for freshmen to meet faculty members, they also had a Christmas party, entered a float in the Homecoming Day float parade, and ended the year with a bang-up picnic.

The largest organized group on campus, the commuters are making everyone else sit up and take notice.

INTERFRATERNITY COUNCIL

The Interfraternity Council is composed of two representatives from each fraternity and has charge of all interfraternity competition, including the float parade, snow sculptures, fraternity sing and skit night. In fraternity athletic competition IFC sponsors touch football, basketball, bowling and softball.

Another event sponsored by the IFC is the annual Greek Week, ending in the Greek Ball. A highlight of this year's IFC activities was the initiation of Greek Help Week to replace the old Hell Week. Fraternity pledges were assigned philanthropic work, such as participation in the local polio fund drive, instead of the usual hazing.

The purpose of Interfraternity Council is to act as a medium for administration and control of all activities involving interfraternity relations, to encourage scholastic achievement, and to promote a spirit of friendly understanding and cooperation between the fraternities and the campus at large.

PAN-HELLENIC COUNCIL

The Pan-Hellenic Council consists of two representatives from each of the seven sororities on campus. Its purpose is to promote cooperation and coordination among the sororities, to maintain good scholarship, to cooperate with University ideals, to get commendable social standards, and to promote friendship among sororities by inter-sorority competition and social events.

"Pan-Hel" takes on active part in informing the freshman women about sororities through the publication of a booklet that is sent to entering freshmen. A contribution to the friendly campus atmosphere this year was the Pan-Hellenic sponsored fall tea to which all freshman women were invited.

Through the Pan-Hellenic Council the friendly exchange of ideas among the sororities for the betterment of campus sorority life is made possible. The Council establishes and enforces rules for the proper regulation of rushing and supervises the November Round Robin.

FACULTY YEAR IN REVIEW

SIDNEY SCHOEFFLER

Public education in the United States, especially at the university level, is predicated upon the belief that new insights resulting from scholarship and laboratory research, as well as creativity in the arts, should be a freely communicated body of knowledge, both within and between universities, and that freedom in the pursuit of truth is essential to the proper functioning of democracy.

It would be a mistake to limit recognition of university service to instruction in the classroom, for this is but a part of the total effort of the faculty. Individual and group research and publication, along with scholarly and scientific investigation under grants-in-aid go on throughout the year, sometimes all but unnoticed by the student body. It is the purpose of this review to spotlight a few of the major accomplishments of the campus faculty.

The publication of a worthwhile book represents an amount of learning and labor that can be completely appreciated only by the one who has written it. During the past year three volumes were authored by members of the UMass faculty. Harvard University Press brought out a volume by Sidney Schoeffler, Associate Professor of Economics--its title, The Failures of Economics -- A Diagnostic Study. Carl A. Keyser, Professor of Metallurgical Engineering, had printed his Basic Engineering Materials, a companion text to his Basic Engineering Metallurgy (1952), both published by Prentice-Hall. C. Wendell King, Associate Professor of Sociology, will have his Social Movements in the United States published by Random House shortly before the close of the school year.

Other university scholars had articles printed in leading journals of their fields, thus sharing their knowledge with scholars throughout the world. Seymour Epstein published a paper on unconscious self-evaluation in the Journal of Abnormal and Social Psychology, while Dwight E. Erlich contributed to the same journal a study of group performance measures and leadership behaviors. In the Psychological Review, Albert E. Goss was the author of an article on the interaction of cue-producing and instrumental responses. These and other papers published by members of the Department of Psychology are but samples of the research investigations conducted, some of which, like Claude C. Neet's and Robert S. Feldman's work on electro-convulsive shock and on the drug reserpine, have immediate bearing on our daily lives.

In the English Department, while considerable activity centered on the radio project, "As Others Read Us," this did not halt other creative efforts of the faculty. Poems by David R. Clark and G. Stanley Koehler were printed in the Yale, Sewanee and Kenyon reviews. Richard Haven published an article on Coleridge in Modern Language Notes, while Maxwell H. Goldberg, Eliot D. Allen and Seymour Rudin wrote for the College English Association Critic. Articles by Sidney Kaplan appeared in the American Quarterly and the Journal of Negro History.

SEYMOUR EPSTEIN

This record of achievement should not be regarded as complete in any respect, for, unfortunately, because of the INDEX deadline and limitations of space, it has been impossible to include all of the scholarly, research and artistic contributions of our teachers.

In the Department of Geology, Leonard R. Wilson, well-known for his expedition work in the Arctic, presented papers before the American Botanical Society in Michigan and the Geological Society of America in New Orleans. Oklahoma Geological Survey published an article of Dr. Wilson's dealing with plant micro-fossils, a result of his work in micropaleontology.

University service also extended to the United States government and to private industry. Many in the engineering field, like Maurice E. Bates, did design and consultant work for corporations, and several devices were patented. Others, like John B. Longstaff and John H. Mitchell, completed projects in naval research, the former on Arctic submarine periscope icing, the latter on systems analysis and coordination.

ALBERT E. GOSS

DAVID R. CLARK

Possibly nothing that a university accomplishes is as much in the forefront of public interest as its scientific research phase. Universities constantly gain news-media recognition for their addition to the store of knowledge about disease. Many of the discoveries in the technique and material of medicine have been made by university faculty members. On the campus, research was conducted in the Department of Zoology on what has been one of the biggest killers in man's history -- cancer. Gilbert L. Woodside, in connection with the U.S. Public Health Service and the National Cancer Institute, experimented with chemicals such as the inhibitor, 8-Azaguanine, which retards the growth of tumors in a number of animals and has a striking effectiveness against a certain type of human brain tumor. H. Duncan Rollason investigated growth of the remaining kidney in cases of kidney removal, attempting to find out whether increased functional demand results in stimulated growth. In diabetic research, James G. Snedecor experimented with a strain of insulin-resistant mice and analyzed the effect of the naturally occurring human blood-substance, glucagon, which partially counteracts the effects of insulin.

G. STANLEY KOEHLER

JAMES G. SNEDECOR

In any attempt to list the accomplishment of a faculty such as ours, it is truly impossible to indicate the intangibles. How could it ever be possible to write of those intense moments when a professor's penetrating insight has so dramatically inspired us? How could it ever be possible to illustrate the patient creation of value and character by their sympathetic understanding and example? Here have truly been the individual professor's greatest accomplishments of the year. He has been the catalyst in the experiment of maturity; the artist in the formation of men and women. Those of you who look back at these lines in later years may recapture, in part, the effect of a busy, energetic faculty, working with interest and perception in their chosen fields.

ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

Robert Leavitt, Alumni Executive Secretary

This Spring marks the end of the third year of reorganization of the Associate Alumni which has approximately 10,000 members. Among main activities this year has been the establishment of a Class Agent System for Fund Solicitation among the several classes. An alumnus from each class has been appointed for this task of raising money for the maintenance of the Association with a long-range plan of providing funds for the University in areas not receiving adequate financial support such as scholarships, lecture-ships, loan funds, etc.

Revitalization of the Club Program has aided in producing four tuition scholarships for needy, worthy students in the areas of Boston, Worcester, Berkshire County and Amherst.

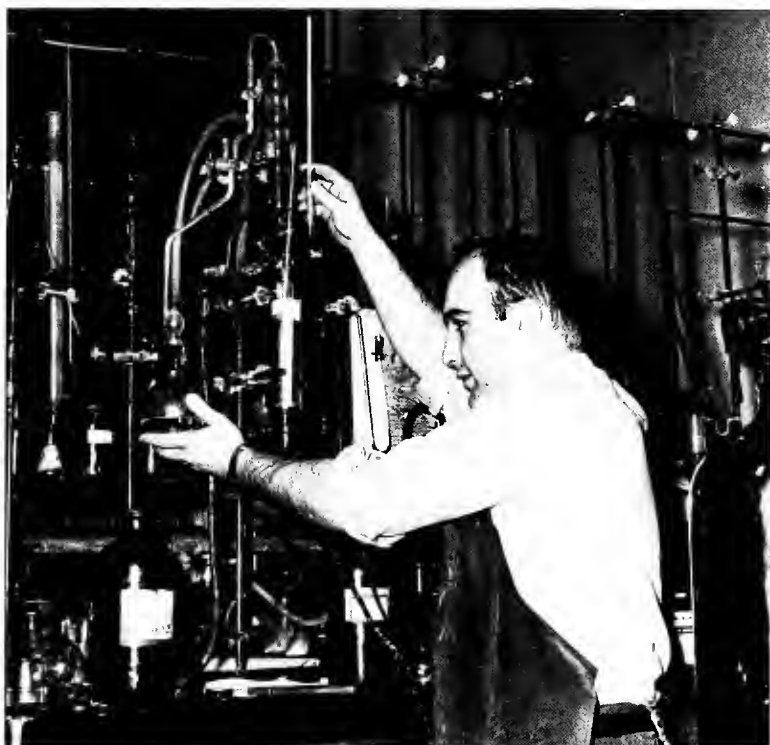

The alumni publication "The Massachusetts Alumnus" has been improved by developing articles aimed at the interests of alumni in their diversified pursuits of life.

This year also marked the first all-out effort in the legislative field by promoting interest and support among our alumni for legislative measures affecting the welfare of the University.

GRADUATE SCHOOL

Gilbert Llewellyn Woodside, Dean

The Graduate School is dedicated to the ideal of the advancement of knowledge through research and other creative work. The Graduate Faculty believes that such work is the best method of developing intellectual humility, because through it the student learns how difficult it is to add to the sum of human knowledge. The Graduate Faculty hopes to stimulate the spark of intellectual curiosity in all of its students, so that regardless of what career they are preparing themselves for their true preparation is for a life devoted to learning. It seeks to develop respect for true scholarship as not alone the grasp of the methodology of a field of learning, but also unwavering dedication to an impelling desire to know.

The Graduate School has maintained a steady rate of growth since its reorganization a few years ago. During the present year its enrollment of 368 students is larger than ever before. Most of its students come from Massachusetts but a number of other states are represented as are 18 foreign countries.

Message to the Class of '56

More than you now know, this INDEX in future years will serve as not only a memory book for your personal library but as a constant reminder or indicator that you were part of a powerful and evolving institution in American society while you attended the University of Massachusetts. I am sure that the longer you live the more grateful you will be for the opportunity you have enjoyed in these environs. For you will find as your wisdom grows that the index of its growth will so often be the ideas and stimulating experiences of your university life. Look back to us in Amherst whenever you can and recall the "happy times and happy talk" we all enjoyed together. I am sure that it is the wish of the entire campus community as well as my wish that you may all experience a richer and fuller life as you fulfill the dreams you started here.

PHI KAPPA PHI

Phi Kappa Phi is the all-University scholastic honor society. The Massachusetts chapter, which observed its fiftieth anniversary on this campus in 1954, consists of approximately seventy-five faculty members and some fifty students elected from the senior class and the graduate school. Its purpose is to recognize and to stimulate high scholastic achievement by students and faculty of the University.

At the opening convocation in the fall, President Mather announced the election of twenty-two seniors to the society on the basis of their high scholastic records and character. In March, Spring elections of seniors, graduate students and faculty members were announced.

Many prominent speakers were presented by the chapter in programs open to the University. In December, Dr. Raswell Ham, president of Mt. Holyoke College, spoke on "Idols of Education-1965," and in May, Professor W. T. Scott of Smith College was featured in the final Phi Kappa Phi program for the year.

UNDERCLASMEN

JUNIORS

The Class of 1957 has more than lived up to the expectations confronting it upon its entrance to the University three years ago. Carrying out the traditional class functions, the juniors showed an initiative and spirit that have proved an example to the other classes. On becoming upperclassmen the juniors retained their spirit and enthusiasm -- but not to the neglect of the all-important academic pursuits nor their extra-curricular responsibilities. This is verified by their outstanding achievements in all campus activities, particularly those important junior responsibilities. . . Winter Carnival, Spring Day, and the sale of Class rings.

The Winter Carnival weekend of 1956 proved to be a social and financial success. The Class of '57 planned a varied and exciting program of events, and more people attended the Carnival weekend than ever before. Among the events were a hayride, fireworks display, jazz concert, fashion show, and the traditional Naiad water ballet. The weekend was climaxed by the Winter Carnival Ball and the unveiling of the "Umie," another first for the Class of 1957. The "Umie" was an Al Copp creation supposedly symbolizing the characteristics of a University of Massachusetts undergraduate. Carnival publicity reached the entire nation when Queen Joan Crawford and her court appeared on the Steve Allen television show, complete with snowman rushed from Amherst to New York. Even the weatherman cooperated by providing the material for the traditional sculptures.

Juniors responded enthusiastically to the new standardized class ring and sales were encouraging. The final junior event was the planning of Spring Day, that all-University function "on the grass" that provides an organized outlet for the pent-up energy of students suffering from "Spring Fever."

The Class of 1957 has had an enjoyable and rewarding year, and wishes the graduating class the best of luck in their future endeavors.

I can't have 82 demerits!

SOPHOMORES

Missing: William Young, Treasurer.

The Class of '58 returned in September with the carefree aplomb of the classic "wise fool." No longer bewildered by the complexities of registration, Sophomores entered the Cage with high hopes of avoiding Saturday classes; sitting in L. A. Annex at eleven-thirty the following Saturday morning, they judged the instructor with the awareness of collegiate yearlings, not with the bewilderment of recent high school graduates.

Warm autumn days were full of renewed friendships, slightly exaggerated tales of summer experiences, and gentle advice to too-trusting freshmen. Nights were spent reviving former romances or visiting familiar town haunts. Football games... Mantovani... dances... a few hour exams... parties... the London Philharmonia... The Madwoman of Chaillot... Thanksgiving... Basketball... more parties... and mid-semester reports. The grades were somehow unexpected and a little frightening, but the concern was eased by the new 10 P.M. deadline for girls, pledging, the Mili Ball, the Christmas sing with its coffee and doughnuts, and that wonderful Christmas vacation.

After vacation came Campus Varieties and the awful reality of finals. Everything ground to a halt while dusty texts and forgotten notes were frantically consulted. Ten days of agony, violent cramming and "I'll do better next time" were followed by a short but welcome hiatus.

Registration lost its old terror with the advent of IBM cards and prompt grade reports. But only the wise remained to enjoy the Fresh-Soph Basketball Game, Inter-class Plays, South Pacific, the Class Banquet, vacation, Greek Ball, ROTC Review, Spring Day, another round of finals, the Soph-Senior Hop... and the rat race was over.

In retrospect, it was a year of finding oneself. Old values were exchanged for new, classes became an academic challenge rather than a chore, and traditions took on meaning. This was the year for extra-curricular activities: WMUA was weighed against the Collegian, Operetta Guild against Roister Daisters, and choices made with an eye to future vacations. New-found poise, broader interests and the remembrance of a successful, though perhaps wild, year -- these became the foundation for a whole new life as the members of '58 become juniors.

The Maroon Key, Sophomore men's honorary society at the University of Massachusetts, was organized to orient the freshmen men to the traditions of the University, to act as official host to all visiting athletic teams, to foster good fellowship, to promote spirit at the University, and to perform numerous other services throughout the school year. Each Spring twenty-five members of the freshman class are selected to become Maroon Keys for the following year and are installed during the impressive tapping ceremonies of the University Honor's Convocation.

The first duty to be performed by Maroon Key members is to help organize and carry out the Freshman Week program. During the initial week the Keys are always available to lend a guiding hand to the bewildered freshmen.

With the arrival of the upperclassmen, the Key must help students through the maze of registration. The ensuing weeks entail cheering at football rallies and games, directing the Maroon Key and Scrolls Dance, sponsoring the traditional rope pull at College Pond during Homecoming Weekend, and the raising of funds for the annual Campus Chest Drive.

MAROON KEY

You, undoubtedly, have seen busy girls in maroon hats directing traffic in the crowded Cage at registration, passing out cookies and sandwiches on Spring Day, ushering campus productions, and, in general, cooperating with the administration and campus organizations. These girls are the Scrolls, sophomore women's honorary society.

The Scrolls' work begins early in the fall. Upon the arrival of the new freshman class, the Scrolls, in conjunction with the Maroon Key, begin their main activity of the year--the welcoming and orientation of the freshmen. Plans are made and carried out for various events to foster friendly relations among all University students, and to make the newcomers "feel at home." As the thought of classes enters the picture, Scrolls are found helping students to penetrate the maze of registration.

In addition to their work on planned activities, Scrolls are a constant influence upon the student body in maintaining a spirit of cooperation, friendliness and scholastic endeavor.

FRESHMEN

With beonies gleaming in the September sun and Handbooks clutched in bewilderment, the Class of 1959 invaded the campus. The emergence of confident personalities and talented individuals from this morass of potential ability seems to be one of the miracles of the University of Massachusetts. Yet, by the time the Class of 1956 received their degrees, the freshmen class had already taken over a share of responsibility.

This integration began when the "Frosh" made their initial appearance on campus. Freshman Week thoroughly fulfilled its purpose of acquainting the new students with University traditions and school spirit, and was climaxed by the well-remembered baptism by fire of orientation exams.

Classes soon began for the freshmen, who viewed their approach with apprehension. Following the first round of classes the general opinion was "High school was never like this!"

Although well started on their road to education, the Class then lacked leaders. When occasion demanded, the executives and talent emerged . . . from Class elections in September, from the formation of the Freshman Inter-dormitory Council, from Inter-class Plays, and from the organization of Parent's Weekend.

Class elections in the fall displayed the unusual spirit of the Class of 1959 when more than the usual number of candidates displayed their posters and letters on various bulletin boards throughout campus. From these came the Class officers: President Bob Myers, Vice President Arthur Caron, Treasurer Barrie Sullivan, and Secretary Judith Heaney.

From the Inter-dormitory Sing and Skit nights to the tapping of Scrolls and Maroon Key, the Class of 1959 has proved its unique enthusiasm for the University life. From the mass of individuals that descended upon the University in the fall has emerged the leadership and originality that now inform the campus . . . "We have arrived."

The 1956 INDEX wishes to thank .....

. . . . . Professor Sidney Kaplan, whose constant aid and advice were invaluable, and who assumed a responsibility for the book far exceeding his capacity as Literary Advisor

. . . . . Professor Lawrence Dickinson, for his untiring assistance in business matters

. . . . . George Humphrey of Christopher Publications, whose technical advice and assistance went far beyond contractual obligations

. . . . . Michael Dasho of Lincoln Studios, for his unfailing cooperation and fine workmanship

. . . . . Thomas Smith, without whose help this book would never have been completed.
